Strike Called By Aluminum Union Affects 15,000 Men

Mediation Board Expected to Act

(Associated Press.)

A strike in all plants of the Aluminum Co. of America was called yesterday by the Aluminum Workers' Council after weeks of fruitless efforts to reach an agreement. The time set for the walkout was midnight last night.

Officials of the American Federation of Labor, asserting the walkout was decided upon as a last resort, said it was authorized by the federation because "the company has failed to make any concession to the workers' demands."

The National Labor Relations Board, which tried unsuccessfully to effect a settlement in the controversy, had not been officially apprised of the strike call late yesterday. Its future action was problematical.

Board Action Probable.

A board official said the members were engaged at a hearing on another labor dispute when word of the aluminum strike call was received.

It was explained the board's connection with the dispute between the aluminum company, controlled by the powerful and wealthy Mellon family, and its unionized employes had been merely that of mediator. Whether it would exercise its powers in an attempt to avert the strike was regarded as probable, although the time for action was short.

The strike originally had been set for July 25, but was postponed pending mediation efforts.

Boris Shishkin, of the American Federation of Labor, who announced the calling of the strike, said the demands of the workers included the check-off system of collecting union dues, a seniority rule and a universal wage system which would give employes performing similar operations the same wage scale in each of the company's plants.

All Demands Rejected.

He denied the workers demanded a closed-shop agreement.

The company has rejected each of the demands, he said, contending the union wanted a closed shop and elimination of the North-South wage differential "which now exists in our industry as well as in all others."

Shishkin said the strike would affect plants of the company in East St. Louis, Ill.; New Kensington, Pa.; Arnold, Pa.; Logans Ferry, Pa.; Massena, N. Y.; Baden, N. C., and Alcoa, Tenn.

The federation official added that

11 More Jews Slain by Arabs

Children Among Victims; Throats of All Slit in New Uprising.

Paris, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Massacre of 11 more Jews in Moslem uprisings in Algeria was reported in unconfirmed dispatches today.

Reports said the Jews were slain in a new race riot at Ain Beida, 10 miles south of Constantine. All victims were mutilated and their throats slit.

The riots added 11 victims to 27 already killed in fanatical anti-Jewish demonstrations in Constantine, French North Africa, in the last ten days, while 400 were wounded. Shops were looted and many burned before Senegalese troops under French officers restored order.

Children were among the victims, all with their throats slashed from ear to ear nearly severing their heads from their bodies.

The rioting aroused the Arab tribesmen and brought hundreds in from the hinterland deserts before the authorities could assure them the trouble had passed.

The newspaper Le Populaire said it learned from private sources in Constantinople that 60 Jews were killed and not 27, adding that the government was withholding the truth.

Gov. Gen. Jules Carde returned by plane from Constantine today and reported to the cabinet on the unrest in Algeria. He said calm had been restored and that he felt the French forces could handle the situation.

Meanwhile, hearings were started in Constantine courts on charges against 144 Arabs arrested in connection with the uprising. Two were charged with murder.

Labor Board Rejects Johnson Statement on Donovan Ouster

Hearing Before Group Enlivened as Dr. Peck Passes 'Lie' to Coe.

The National Labor Relations Board last night refused to accept a two-page typewritten statement from Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson in lieu of testimony as to why he had discharged John L. Donovan, president of the NRA employes union.

Several hours previously counsel for Gen. Johnson told the board that he was too busy to attend the hearing because of more pressing matters.

"This board is ready at all times to hear Gen. Johnson if he wishes to testify at a later date," said Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the newly created commission.

"We do not wish to bring any pressure on Gen. Johnson, however, and if he does not care to testify we will decide the case on the testimony submitted today."

Rejection of the statement came at the close of an all-day hearing and immediately after a verbal clash between Dr. Gustav Peck, of the NRA Labor Advisory Board, and one of his employers, Charles Coe, who informed the board that Dr. Peck had threatened him with the assertion:

"Just because I say you're effi-

Act Advances Inflation Aspects of U. S. Monetary Plan.

New Money Certificates Will Be Limited to Purchase Price.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Inflationary aspects of the Treasury's silver program were enhanced last night when officials announced that silver certificates will be issued against free silver bullion held in the general fund up to its full monetary value of $1.29 an ounce.

Certificates also will be issued on the same basis against new silver stocks acquired by Thursday's nationalization of the metal, but "for the present" the Treasury will print an aggregate amount equal only to its cost, which was set at 50.01 cents an ounce.

In a statement which apparently contradicted Secretary Morgenthau in his first announcement of silver plans, the Treasury explained that silver already on hand before passage of the silver purchase act will be treated differently than silver acquired later.

62,000,000 Ounces on Hand.

Approximately 62,000,000 ounces were held at the time the President on June 14, it was divulged for the first time, ordered the Treasury to print certificates against its silver holdings, in accordance with authority contained in the gold reserve act of 1934.

"These silver certificates are being issued on a basis of $1.29 an ounce," the Treasury explained, "because that is required by law for all certificates. The total amount to be issued, under the President's order against these 62,000,000 ounces, will be of a face amount of approximately $80,000,000."

This is almost double the cost price, which Mr. Morganthau originally said would be the extent of the issuance of new certificates. The 62,000,000 ounces cost the Treasury approximately $46,900,000, representing gradual acquisitions for many months, including silver payments on the war debts a year ago.

The appearance yesterday for the first time of a mysteriously new $6,136,421 item labeled "seigniorage" in the Treasury's daily statement prompted inquiries which eventually led to the explanation. This item covers the difference in the cost of the silver and the face amount of certificates—the Treasury's "profit."

Law Sets $1.29 Price.

Further explaining that the Treasury has received a total of $387,000,000 in seigniorage "since the beginning of the Government," officials said that according to law certificates had to be issued on the basis of $1.29 an ounce. Under the silver purchase act, however, certificates need not be released up to the full monetary value.

"The silver certificates to be issued against this silver," the Treasury said regarding metal now being acquired under the silver purchase act, "will also, of course, be issued on the basis of $1.29 per ounce, as required by law.

"For the present the Treasury will issue against this silver an

Roosevelt Back Home; Calls on Aids to Push New Deal Expansion

High Food Prices Predicted by Wallace

Forecast Follows U. S. Report Showing Smallest Grain Yield in Generation; Lifting of Acreage Restriction Expected.

Food prices will be "materially higher" next year, Secretary Wallace predicted yesterday after issuance of a Federal report estimating the smallest yield of grain this year in a generation due to the drought.

He discredited speculation over a possible food shortage, but conceded record smashing crop losses would result in "very material" modification next year in the far-flung acreage restriction program now in force.

"There won't be the customary supply of sirloin steaks and pork chops next year," Mr. Wallace commented, "but there will be plenty of food to keep everyone in the best of health.

"Prices will necessarily be materially higher, but it is doubtful that psices received by farmers for food as a whole next year will represent a higher portion of the consumer's dollar than was the case in the pre-war period of 1909-1914."

The forecast for this year's corn production was 1,607,108,000 bushels, a decline of more than 500,000,000 bushels from the yield predicted July 1, and the smallest total since 1894. The crop ordinarily reaches 2,500,000,000 bushels.

An estimated wheat crop of 490,960,000 bushels also was the smallest in more than two-score years. The figure, however, was 6,000,000 bushels larger than forecast a month ago.

A wheat output of the size estimated for this year would be about 7 per cent less than the 1933 crop and almost 45 per cent lower than the 1927-31 average of 886,359,000 bushels.

Water and feed shortages also have put a big dent in the Nation's meat supply. Millions of cattle and sheep have been prematurely slaughtered.

Mr. Wallace made it clear the AAA would not abandon the crop reduction principle. He said it was impossible now to tell what modification would come next year, but that any restrictions lifted in 1935 would be reimposed in 1936 if considered desirable to avert large agricultural surpluses.

One thing the department will bear in mind, he said, is that in the past nitrates stored in the soil in dry seasons invariably have resulted in larger crops the following year on a minimum of water.

He added some type of control would be needed in 1935 to prevent the longe range program from "getting very seriously out of Morgenthau and Hull First to Confer at White House.

"Glad to Be Back," Says President

Chief Executive Thanks Train Crew; Weight Gain Noted.

Bronzed and invigorated by his 12,000-mile vacation trip to Hawaii and back, President Roosevelt returned to the Capital at noon yesterday and immediately plunged into problems accumulated in his seven weeks' absence.

An informal but noisy greeting awaited him from a small crowd as he arrived at Union Station, alighted from his air-cooled transcontinental train, and was whisked away to the White House at the head of a nine-car procession.

Back at the White House, strangely changed in his long absence due to building operations at the Executive offices, the President showed an immediate preference for the cool oval study on the second floor, where he worked the remainder of the day.

Morgenthau Makes Report.

First of the Cabinet officers to report was Secretary Morgenthau, who was closeted with the Chief Executive for the better part of an hour, going over details of the Administration's spectacular seizure of all silver bullion the day before.

Nationalization of silver was ordered by Mr. Roosevelt in a dramatic telephone conversation with the Treasury Secretary from Green Bay, Wis., where the President served notice that there will be no turning back from policies of the New Deal.

The President also found time to go over international developments with Secretary of State Hull, who called at tea time. The rest of the day was devoted to heavy baskets of work and worry, which had been put off until the Chief Executive's return.

Secretaries Morgenthau, Hull and Roper were on hand to welcome the President at the station, going aboard his private car after it was shunted into a siding. Also there to meet him was Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, the President's daughter, who returned recently with a Nevada divorce.

In Vigorous Health.

As the President appeared on the back platform, observers noted his vigorous good health. Gone were the lines of care that marked his face when he cruised away from Annapolis 42 days ago. Observers noted, too, an apparent gain in weight.

"Mighty glad to be back," he remarked to the Cabinet officers.

Then the President, clad in a plain seersucker suit, waved a response to the welcome and thanked the train crew before entering his

Roberts Heads District Legion; Vote on Bonus

J. J. Malloy Is Defeated in Heated Contest at 16th Meet.

James O'Connor Roberts, former solicitor of the Veterans' Administration, was elected commander of the District Department of the American Legion last night.

Roberts, a member of Stuart Walcott Post, won in close balloting over Joseph J. Malloy, Washington attorney, Sergt. Jasper Post. The third nominee was Charles Kohen, Costello Post.

The election of Roberts came near the close of the sixteenth annual convention at Paul Junior High School. Roberts succeeds former Senator Rice W. Means.

Roberts, a graduate of Georgetown University Law School, has been prominent in legion affairs for many years. At present he is commander of Stuart Walcott Post.

The convention also is electing a full slate of department officers and eight delegates and ten alternates to the National Legion convention at Miami, Fla. A brisk fight is expected for first, second and third vice commanders. Candidates for all posts were nominated Thursday night.

Former Senator Rice W. Means, the retiring department commander, will be backed by the District department for National commander at Miami.

Last night's meeting also was expected to see a close ballot on a resolution favoring immediate cash payment of the bonus.

This question met with considerable opposition when it was introduced Thursday night as a rider to a resolution approving the National organization's rehabilitation program. The rider was withdrawn for separate consideration at last night's session.

Hundreds Flee Flood; 2 Dead

Entire Town Inundated in East Kentucky Disaster.

Ashland, Ky., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—The muddy tide of a cloudburst swept away all the worldly possessions of hundreds of people, took two lives and laid waste the fertile lowlands of Carter and Rowan Counties today. It was the most devastating flood ever recorded in this section of eastern Kentucky. Property damage will be counted in hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Mothers and babies, whole families clutching bundles of clothing, fled to the hillsides as creeks that normally were only ribbons of water swelled into mighty rivers, inundated the town of Olive Hill in Carter County, swept away bridges, houses, barns and live stock, and washed growing crops of corn, potatoes and tobacco out of the ground.

Two boys, 4 and 8 years old, were drowned near Hitchins when a barn was washed away and driven against a farmhouse.

Tygarts Creek inundated Olive Hill at noon with almost unbelievable swiftness. About 11 o'clock this morning the swollen creek was lapping at the surface of the bridge near the Olive Hill railroad station. Crowds of people watched the water coming up. Thirty minutes later the bridge had been swept away, the water had crossed the railroad and nearly every business house in town was flooded. The bridge was knocked from its piling by a house, carried along by the flood waters.

Pigs, cattle and other live stock either were carried away by the flood or went splashing through the water that covered the streets.

Houses on the banks of small streams between the Boyd County line and Morehead, where a score of families were made homeless,

Kentucky Section Flooded; Mercury at 90 in D. C.; Humidity High.

11 a. m.	87	5 p. m.	85
Noon	88	6 p. m.	84
1 p. m.	90	7 p. m.	83
2 p. m.	89	8 p. m.	81
3 p. m.	88	9 p. m.	78

As heavy rains refreshed some sections of the parched Middle West and Great Plains yesterday, causing a part of Kentucky to be inundated by a flood, Washington perspired under a maximum temperature of 90 degrees and an average humidity of 70, which prostrated one man.

The District's highest reading was at 1 p. m. The day was mostly cloudy, with slight breezes.

Today will be fair, with little change in temperature, the Weather Bureau predicted.

Residents of Western States hoped that precipitation meant the beginning of the end of the costly drought, which has withered crops and killed live stock by the thousands.

Weather experts, however, the Associated Press reported, made few predictions on the subject. They said the rains were caused by the "collision" of cool air from central Canada and the heated atmosphere which has hovered over the North Central States.

The showers tempered the in-

Pikes Peak Scaled On Knees by Man Unable to Walk

Colorado Springs, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Raymond Phelps scaled Pikes Peak today, although he can't walk.

He did it on his hands and knees—13 hours of toil up the cog road—and then said:

"It was marvelous—simply wonderful. It was worth all the effort, and, believe me, it was some tough climb."

The scaling of the 14,000-foot peak fulfilled an ambition of a lifetime.

Yesterday, about 4 p. m. Phelps and three friends, William Townley, Bill Rapp and Ralph Teeters, started the ascent. Phelps wore leather pads on his knees and leather gloves on his hands.

Gandhi Reported Weak In New Hunger Strike

Wardha, India, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Fears for the life of the Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, on a week's fast, were felt tonight when his doctors reported the elderly diminutive leader was "very weak."

Gandhi is undertaking the fast as another gesture to attract attention to his campaign for equal treatment of India's 60,000,000 "untouchables" of the lowest Hindu caste.

Cost Barrier To Subway, Says Expert

"Great Caution" Urged; Submits Three Trolley Rerouting Plans.

"Great caution" should be used in approaching the problem of installing subways or sub-surface street car lines in the District, another installment of the John A. Beeler traffic reports stated yesterday, because the operating, physical and financial problems involved therein are so great.

"The cost of a modern, two-track subway, exclusive of equipment," it is stated, "runs from $4,000,000 to $8,000,000 per mile." Referring to the subsurface car line scheme, to which it gives somewhat qualified approval, the report continues: "While the cost under this method is not quite so formidable as that of standard subway construction, it usually involves an amount of such magnitude that few companies have attempted the method without the assistance of civic or public aid."

The subsurface car line, it states, "has the advantage of operating the same equipment through tunnels and over streets without the necessity of passengers changing from surface to subway cars. After leaving the tunnels the cars may fan out over their respective routes on the surface tracks."

Yesterday's presentation, which John A. Beeler, New York traffic expert, handed over to the Public Utilities Commission, included complete details of three trolley rerouting plans for the downtown area, as well as the cost thereof, and a supplement on bus routes. The Beeler organization already has made public a briefer summary of its plans, as well as a report on the general method of attacking the problem.

The plans are numbered I, II and

New Dealers Turn Backs On Shipstead

Senator Is Tossed Aside in Attempt to Salvage Party in Minnesota.

By Elliott Thurston.

Minneapolis, Aug. 10.—In an effort to salvage the Democratic party in Minnesota, the New Deal is prepared to throw all of its influence behind Einar Hoidale in the Senatorial race this fall—and to throw Senator Hinrik Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite New Dealer, to the wolves.

Unless the New Deal's popularity fades out rapidly by election day, Hoidale, a member of the last Congress, should win. Shipstead alone among the Progressives who have backed the New Deal is being sacrificed to Democratic National Chairman-Postmaster General Farley's political strategy.

Hoidale easily won the Democratic Senatorial nomination. Shipstead beat pugnacious Representative Shoemaker for the Farmer-Laborite nomination by nearly 3 to 1. The Republicans nominated Nathaniel Holmberg, a farmer—but nobody concedes him even an outside chance.

Barkley Hints Move.

The first sign that the New Deal proposed to give its blessings to Hoidale was Senator Alvin Barkley's speech at the Democratic convention extolling Hoidale. The Kentuckian, it will be recalled, was the New Deal keynoter at the 1932 Chicago convention. But even the Barkley indorsement did not erase the common belief in Minnesota that the New Deal would either keep its hands off or else give Mr. Shipstead the same accolade bestowed upon the other Progressives who have been loyal New Dealers.

The expectation was short-lived.

Wife, Young Son See Man Drown

River Victim Meets Death on Eve of 27th Birthday.

On the eve of his twenty-seventh birthday, Howard Drysdale, of 1121 Fourth street southwest, was drowned yesterday in Little Rivar, a tributary of the Potomac, near the Washington-Hoover Airport.

With his wife, who was planning a birthday party for him tonight, Drysdale went on a swimming party. With them was his sister-in-law and his son, Jackie, 9.

Drysdale was a Capital Traction Co. bus driver.

Life guards from the airport swimming pool heard the cries of the women and ran to his aid. He sank before they could reach him. William Bargagni, the son of Sergt. A. J. Bargagni of the District Fire Department, recovered the body.

Life guards and members of the Fire Rescue Squad unsuccessfully applied artificial respiration. They removed the body to the District Morgue.

Preacher, in Agony From Snake Bite, Pits Faith Against Poison

Sylva, N. C., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—A mountain preacher, in agony, but refusing medical aid, tonight continued to put his faith in God against a rattlesnake's venom—and apparently he was winning.

Although Albert Teester still was seriously ill from the effects of letting the reptile strike him twice Sunday night as a demonstration to his congregation of the power of faith, the swelling of his body had diminished and he seemed definitely on the road to recovery.

Near death yesterday, the 39-year-old Holiness Church leader was able to prop himself up and talk.

"Not for a moment have I lost my faith," he said. "I had faith in the Lord that he would take care of me and He has shown that in the days since I was bitten.

Teester told how he undertook the demonstration before his flock of 40.

"Sunday night at the church some one brought in a snake," he said. "I hadn't urged them to do it, but I had told them I'd handle a serpent if they wanted me to.

"In Luke xvi it says, 'Thou shalt take up serpents,' and because God said this that's why I took up the rattlesnake. I did it for the glory of God."

Calling on his congregation to witness that the snake could do him no harm, Teester held it up in his pulpit. In a moment the snake's head flashed twice and its fangs sank into his arm. Screaming, he ran from the pulpit and rolled on the ground.

Asked why he refused a physician's help, Teester said:

"I take God for my healer and will not have a doctor or use any medicines."

The preacher lives in a three-room frame house 14 miles from here and accessible only by a 3-mile mountain trail. During his illness, Bud Bryson, 25, a follower, has cared for him and his five young children. Mrs. Teester died 14 months ago in childbirth. In keeping with her husband's beliefs, she had no medical attention.

Robot Balloon Will Radio Cosmic Ray Secrets to Land

Chicago, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—A gas bag with a radio brain and without a human crew is ready for a solo jaunt into the stratosphere to signal back answers to the scientists' question, "What and where is the cosmic ray?"

Authors of the novel plan to explore the 10-mile limit above the earth without chart or pilot are Prof. Arthur Compton, Nobel prize winner, of the University of Chicago physics department, and Prof. J. M. Benade, of India.

Prof. Benade, here on furlough for the last year from Foreman Christian College in Lahore, harnessed a short wave radio to a 15-foot hydrogen balloon and perfected a method of automatic signals.

Listening to the continuous or the intermittent buzz from the radio set in the high skies, the professors down on the Chicago campus can interpret constantly the barometric pressure and thus estimate the altitude of the balloon above the earth. They can read the temperature at frequent intervals, and jot down on thir log every ten minutes the intensity of the cosmic rays 5, 8, 10 miles up while the observers enjoy the comfort and safety of the classroom.

Two balloons were ready to sail up in auspicious weather, and to make a trial ascent of 1,000 feet, held down by ropes, on the first windless day.

Prof. Compton, who has been tinkering and theorizing with cosmic rays ever since their existence became suspected, also made known today that a plan has been projected to establish around the world a series of scientific stations with cosmic ray traps. The balloons, Prof. Compton said, will hunt up a cosmic ray and diagnose just what it is. The ground stations, suggested for New Zealand, Peru, Mexico, Greenland and a Carnegie Institute post at Cheltenham, Md., would purpose to figure out whence the rays emanate.

The free balloons were designed to avoid the prohibitive expense and the human risk involved in the stratospheric adventures of the last two years.

Grains Suffer Price Setbacks

Quotations Battered Down by Profit Taking on All but Corn, Barley.

Chicago, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Most grains suffered price setbacks today for the first time in a week.

Although new high records for the season were established early in the session, heavy profit taking sales later battered quotations down to net losses for all cereals except corn and barley.

The new peaks in wheat were about one-half cent above yesterday's top figures, $1.13¾ for December deliveries. However, December closed at $1.11⅞ to $1.12⅛, a net loss of almost 2 cents from yesterday. Finishing prices today were about 8 cents better than those of a week ago.

Strength displayed in corn buoyed the market in spite of the dumping of thousands of bushels in a rush for profits. At the peak, corn showed the best price since 1930, December options being quoted at 84. The close, however, was at 83⅛, a net gain of about five-eighths from yesterday. The advance in corn in a week has been about 9 cents.

Rye and oats closed fractionally off.

The heaviest volume of trading on the mercantile exchange this year swept butter and egg futures to new 1934 high peaks. November butter touched the highest mark since November 28, 1931, at 27⅛ cents.

Sen. Shipstead Cast Overboard For New Deal

Mr. Farley sent a message to the convention praising Mr. Hoidale and followed it up with a personal letter which, if it means anything, means that the New Deal is wholly and exclusively for Hoidale.

This has caused some dejection among Senator Shipstead's friends—much muttering about ingratitude—and it has virtually paralyzed the Senator's vocal chords. He has been able so far to say only that he would have nothing to say about politics until September.

Meanwhile, he is watchfully waiting. It is fair to deduce that his devotion to the New Deal will become progressively diluted—that he will make the most of such discontent as develops among the voters between now and election day. And discontent is developing. In Minnesota, as in other agrarian sectors, the farmers are not mollified by the bounties from the Federal Treasury.

"Opinion is mixed," a veteran political writer who has followed the Minnesota political puzzle for 30 years, explained. "The New Deal is no longer popular with the farmers. They don't like the AAA—or the NRA. Many of them side with Senator Nye. The Digest poll showed Minnesota for the New Deal in about the same proportion as in the last election, but very few politicians think it was significant.

Link Relief With Charity.

"A lot of money has been poured in here for the corn-hog and wheat programs and for drought relief. The farmers, or most of them, link all that up with charity. They don't like Secretary Wallace. Prof. Tugwell was out this way—in South Dakota—and they sized him up as a theorist who didn't know much about farming in the Northwest.

"The drought has changed the whole situation. The old theory, of the McNary-Haugen bill, was to dump the surplus abroad. Now the farmers realize that there is no surplus at hand, and they figure that Nature knows how to take care of matters better than the AAA theorists who tried crop reduction. Tugwell's efforts to persuade them that the crop curtailment program helped them in spite of the drought is not understood. It is too complicated for the farmers."

In the cities the politicians assume that mass sentiment is overwhelmingly pro-New Deal and that it will continue to do so as long as the money—and the jobs—from Washington hold out. One hears repeatedly—though I have seen no figures to prove it—that relief rolls are steadily increasing instead of diminishing.

However, in this territory as in other Midwestern and Eastern States, it is evident that business-banking opinion is almost solidly hostile to the New Deal. Where there have been severe strikes, such as the truckmen's strike in this city, the latest and most emphasized count against the New Deal is its supposedly deliberate fomenting of labor troubles.

Shipstead Victory Seen.

That the now silent Shipstead will capitalize some of the growing antipathy to New Deal method and policy is entirely probable in view of the cold shoulder which Farley, as the New Deal political commander-in-chief, has turned toward him.

My guess is that Shipstead will come through on top. The probabilities are that he will garner many Republican votes, as well as some from the discontented Democrats—and the Farmer-Labor organization unquestionably dominates Minnesota now. The Farmer-Laborites have the governorship—in the rampageous, politically skilled Floyd Olson. They had five seats in the last Congress, to three for the Republicans and but one occupied by a Democrat, who was Hoidale.

Because Minnesota was late in redistricting, all her Congressmen were elected at large two years ago. In the new districting, done by the Farmer-Laborites—thanks to Olson's veto power, too—the Farmer-Laborites gave themselves all the breaks they could. Even so, if the New Deal is as popular as its proponents here think, the fall election will see a delegation of three Farmer-Laborites, three Democrats and three Republicans.

Because Olson has made enemies—and unwittingly antagonized labor by declaring martial law in the Minneapolis truck strike — he might be beaten this fall if a fusion movement now much talked of, but remote and improbable, take place. The Democrats have nominated John E. Regan, fire-eating Irish lawyer, for Governor. The Republicans have nominated Martin A. Nelson, young lawyer and war veteran. However, he is not well known.

Regan Appears Forgiven.

The Farley strategy, looking to permanent establishment of a strong Democratic organization in Minnesota, calls for Regan's election, even though Regan headed the State's uninstructed delegation to the 1932 convention—and it was no secret that the uninstructed delegates preferred Al Smith. Mr. Farley appears to have forgiven Mr. Regan—though the "F. D. R. B. C." faction, headed by National Committeeman Joe Wolf, has had the inside track in patronage.

However, this is Scandinavian country hereabouts. The Irish do not stand much show. It will take not only an improbable fusion but a vast popularity of the New Deal to vanquish Gov. Olson. He, too, has been pro-New Deal. It has been proverbial that every time the Governor has gone to Washington the National debt has been sharply increased.

What has further damaged Olson—and might have damaged Shipstead had he not taken refuge in silence—is the bright red platform which the Farmer-Laborites adopted in their convention. It called for a "cooperative commonwealth," a Marxian phrase. It proposed to take over all private industry. It scared the moderates and the conservatives to death. And its authors have been trying to tone it down and live it down ever since. Even so, it has left its impress on the public mind. Minnesota seems far more radical politically than any State in the Union. Superficially this true. The conservatives and moderates have had little recent political expression.

Yet fundamentally it is doubtful if the rank and file of the State are as socialistic as political expressions would suggest. The farmers here as elsewhere are at heart capitalists and individualists. Olson has called himself a "radical," not merely a "liberal," and in moments of oratorical excitement he has talked about taking over industry.

Bark Worse Than Bite.

But this bark is worse than the bite—as is indicated by the movement now under way to form another thoroughly radical party in this State. Agitators on soap boxes are trying to arouse a radical left-wing sentiment and to organize it, but they have as yet made no important headway.

Olson, who aspires to come to the Senate—and hopes to beat the blind Senator Schall, Republican, in 1936—also harbors ambitions to lead a third party movement as a Presidential candidate. He is, by all odds, the most colorful figure on the Minnesota political stage. Compared to him the tall, now tongue-tied Shipstead is glum and morose. Olson is likely at any moment to turn his guns on New Deal policies, now that Mr. Farley has mixed in to back mere Democrats and spurn erstwhile loyal Farmer-Laborites.

That Olson will be reelected is taken for granted; that Shipstead still has the edge, despite the New Deal's snubbing, is the consensus among political authorities hereabouts. Again it appears that Mr. Farley's interventions will end in defeat of his chosen New Dealers.

Fit After Hawaiian Trip, President Returns

Underwood & Underwood.

Sun-bronzed and refreshed after his lengthy vacation, which carried him through the Panama Canal to Hawaii and back across the Nation, President Roosevelt arrived at the White House yesterday. He is shown returning from the station with his only daughter, Mrs. Curtis B. Dall, who has just won a divorce from her broker husband, and his close friend and personal secretary, Louis McHenry Howe.

President Roosevelt congratulates L. A. Walmsley, engineer of the special train which brought him to Washington after his 41-day trip to Hawaii and intermediate points. The President also thanked other members of the train crew.

limousine. With him were his son, John, and daughter, Mrs. Dall, who wore a print dress and a white beret with a silver feather.

Another enthusiastic greeting was accorded the President as he stepped off the elevator on the main floor of the White House and shook hands with half a dozen secretaries. Although he arrived somewhat late, he was still on time for luncheon, after which he retired to his second-floor study.

The President found the White House converted into an office building, with typewriters rattling and telephones jingling on both lower floors. His desk is in the blue oval room, directly off the main lobby, but he showed a liking for the second floor, most of which is air-cooled.

Off to Hyde Park Soon.

How long he will stay here before leaving for his old home at Hyde Park, N. Y., remained a matter of speculation, but it was thought he would hasten there for the rest of the summer, in about two weeks. Rebuilding of the Executive offices has crowded things to such an extent it was believed he would be more comfortable there.

Picking up loose ends of his recovery program, the President will call in other leaders for conferences over the week-end. Engagements are scheduled today with Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities Commission; Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman; James A. Moffett, housing administrator, and Governor Eugene Black, of the Federal Reserve.

Governor Black will press upon the President the resignation he submitted without success soon after Congress adjourned, thus presenting the problem of a successor to the genial Atlantan. Other questions immediately ahead include the future of NRA and AAA, drought relief and the monetary policy.

Hoover Is Jovial On 60th Birthday

"Never Felt Better," Says Former President.

Palo Alto, Calif., Aug. 10 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover was in a jovial, smiling mood today as telegrams of congratulation poured into his home here on his sixtieth birthday and friends and neighbors called.

"I have never felt better in my life," he exclaimed as he sauntered through the garden of his San Juan Hill home on the Stanford campus.

Mr. Hoover declined to talk on National issues, although one questioner pointed out "there are many interesting things to talk about."

aggregate face amount of certificates equal to its cost. The difference between the cost of the silver will have to be held to secure these certificates when they are issued and the monetary value ($1.29 an ounce) of the silver so held will be carried as seigniorage as indicated above."

While the opportunity for further inflation was obvious, it was conceded that if the present policy of issuing certificates against nationalized silver only up to the cost is followed, the monetary expansion will be insignificant. On the basis of 150,000,000 ounces of silver in this country, the amount of new currency would be limited to $75,000,000.

This amount, however, would be in addition to the $80,000,000 in certificates now being printed against the Treasury's old bullion. And the Treasury, under the silver purchase act, is authorized, though not directed, to issue certificates up to the entire monetary value of new silver acquired by nationalization.

Possible further manipulation of the currency engrossed business as the Treasury began drafting regulations to govern its sudden seizure of all silver stocks and the markets settled back apathetically from Thursday's short-lived flurry. Stocks, bonds, and commodities fell, as what appeared to be a mild inflation boom evaporated.

Chief reaction in financial circles to the Treasury's action appeared to be the rekindling of uncertainty over the Administration's monetary policy. Inflationists have never let up in their demands that gold be revalued to the 50 per cent limit allowed by law. To this uncertainty is added the uncertainties inherent in the Treasury's secret silver purchase program.

Secretary Morgenthau was first of the Cabinet officers to confer with the President on his return yesterday. But whether they went beyond details of the nationalization of silver, such as the possibility of an international monetary agreement, could not be learned. After the conference, Mr. Morgenthau left for his Hudson Valley home with this mere comment:

"I think now that the President's back, he should talk for himself."

France Holds Franc At Its Present Value

Paris, Aug. 10 (AP).—Despite fears in financial circles that nationalization of silver by President Roosevelt may forecast another dollar devaluation, the French government remained firm today in its determination to hold the franc at its present value.

Financiers said, however, that increasing cheapness of the dollar will strengthen the cause of franc devaloration as the need grows for meeting world competition.

The United States dollar dropped today from an overnight rate of 15.11 francs to the dollar (6.618 cents to the franc) to 14.98 (6.676 cents to the franc).

Remonetization Seen by Wheeler

He Would Open Mints to Free Silver Coinage.

Glacier Park, Mont., Aug. 10 (AP). United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, today regarded President Roosevelt's nationalization of silver as a "step toward remonetization."

He added, however, that "I have not changed my mind on the proposition that the only way to deal with silver is to open the mints to free coinage on a basis of not to exceed 16 ounces of silver to 1 of gold."

Senator Wheeler said he believed nationalization should bring about a mild expansion of our currency and raise the world price of the metal.

100 Polish Agitators Expelled From France

Paris, Aug. 10 (AP).—The government took a firm stand against foreign labor agitators today by ordering 100 Polish miners who recently struck underground at Lens to leave France within 48 hours.

The expulsion order, which implied that similar summary action would be taken in the future in all such cases, will be carried out by a heavy police force which will escort the miners to the frontier.

Board to Hear Complaints on 4 Steel Firms

Amalgamated Union Files Demands Involving Labor Elections.

Acting on union complaints against four steel corporations, the National Steel Labor Relations Board yesterday scheduled four meetings to hear charges raised by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The corporations named by the union in its complaints are the Apollo Steel Co., of Apollo, Pa.; the Standard Tin Plate Co., Canonburg, Pa.; the West Virginia Rail Co., Huntington, W. Va., and the Wheeling Steel Corporation, Portsmouth, Ohio.

The board will sit in Pittsburgh Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, next week, to hear the first three cases, and will then go to Portsmouth on Monday, August 20, for a hearing in the Wheeling Steel case.

A fortnight ago the Steel Board settled a dispute between the Amalgamated Association and the Republic Steel Corporation and plants in two Ohio towns were reopened as a result.

Elections to determine the will of the employes regarding representation for collective bargaining are requested in the two Pennsylvania and the West Virginia cases, while the complaint against the Portsmouth company is that employes have been denied collective bargaining rights granted under section 7 (a) of the National recovery act.

The National Labor Relations Board, a companion body of the Steel Board, yesterday ordered the Ira Wilson & Sons Dairy, of Detroit, to reinstate six employes discharged for union activities.

Unless the men are reinstated within a week, the board said, the case will be referred to the NRA compliance division for appropriate action.

U. S. Judge May End Long's Row

Republican Urged to Act as Peacemaker at New Orleans.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 10 (AP).—One of the city's leading Republicans may be called upon to act as mediator between the embattled Democratic factions of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley and Senator Huey P. Long.

Civic and business organizations pleaded for truce, but the Walmsley and Long forces continued to glare at each other across a narrow street in the city hall area.

Representatives of 14 New Orleans public bodies met this morning. The name of Senior United States Circuit Judge Rufus E. Foster, veteran jurist, Republican and distinguished figure in New Orleans's public life, was frequently mentioned as mediator.

Neither of the warring factions showed any sign of giving in after nearly two weeks of tense antagonism, marked by mobilization of the National Guard, the augmenting of the city police force to 1,400 men, complicated cross-litigation and vituperative statements.

Long's militia still held the city voting registration office despite cries of the Walmsley faction that the registration books were being manipulated in advance of the Congressional primary on September 11, in which the two factions have rival candidates.

The citizens' caucus named a mediation committee of five to "visit both sides and bring about a settlement" in the factional war. If they fail, Judge Foster may be "drafted."

Huge Silver Profit Denied by Coughlin

Radio Church Made Only $12,000, Says Priest.

Detroit, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—The Radio League of the Little Flower no longer holds silver for speculation, and a previous $12,000 profit was "water over the dam months ago," the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, radio pastor, declared today.

Father Coughlin denied a report that the league would be ahead some $120,000 as result of the Treasury Department's announcement yesterday that the Government would buy silver at a fixed price.

"Everyone knows the Radio League purchased 250,000 ounces of silver on margin," the priest maintained. "The league sold its holding months ago, and made a profit of $12,000. That money was spent on last year's broadcasting."

Judge Regrets He Can't Give Prisoner More

Miami, Fla., Aug. 10 (AP).—Leo Scott Dillingham, who has figured in many promotional enterprises here, in Havana, and Phoeniz, Ariz., today was sentenced to serve four years in Atlanta Penitentiary and heard the court express regret "that I can't give you more."

Dillingham, returned here last Tuesday after Cuban secret police placed him aboard a United States-bound steamer, was sentenced for violation of his probation in a case of conspiracy to defraud the Government, and on conviction of a tariff violation charge.

Strike Ordered For Aluminum Plant Workers approximately 15,000 workers are involved by the strike order.

Workers Vote Picket For Aluminum Plants

New Kensington, Pa., Aug. 10 (U.P.). A meeting of aluminum workers of the Aluminum Co. of America tonight voted to picket the company's three plants in this district at 11:18 p. m.

Picket lines, according to those who attended the meeting, will be drawn up around the New Kensington, Arnold and Logans Ferry plants of the company, which employ a total of 3,500 workers, when the 11:18 p. m. shift is scheduled to go on duty.

From 500 to 700 workers attended the meeting.

The first casualty was reported shortly after the meeting when a foreman attempted to enter the New Kensington plant. Pickets attempted to dissuade him and when he persisted a scuffle ensued and he was struck on the head. He was removed before his name could be learned.

Strike Order Affects 2,000 in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10 (AP).—Officials of the Aluminum Company of America and heads of the Aluminum Workers Union were both noncommittal tonight concerning the calling of a strike in the industry.

Union leaders said the walkout had been ordered and authorized by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. They said it would take effect at once.

Company executives said they had not received official notification of the strike and added they were making no special preparations to meet the situation.

Approximately 2,000 men are employed in the industry in this section. All work at the New Kensington, Logans Ferry and Arnold plants of the aluminum company, a Mellon firm.

Green Approves Strike If Mediation Move Fails

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 10 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, today authorized the Aluminum Workers Council to call a strike in all plants of the Aluminum Co. of America "when it becomes absolutely clear that all efforts at mediation have failed."

The strike, immediately called by the workers' council in Washington for midnight, will affect 8,000 members, Green said, of approximately 20 local unions in company plants.

Green, attending sessions of the executive council of the federation, kept in communication with A. R. Buller, president, and Fred A. Whetmore, secretary of the Aluminum Workers Council, who told him efforts at mediation had failed, meeting "with the absolute refusal of the company to enter into agreement or make any concessions whatever."

The workers, largely organized under the NRA, Green said, demanded union recognition, wage increases and shorter hours. Green said the workers sought to strike a week ago, after the company made a "flat refusal" of the proposals, but that he had urged the National Labor Relations Board be given opportunity to seek a settlement before the strike took place.

Union Leaders Issue Rule Against Violence

Massena, N. Y., Aug. 10 (AP). Between 900 and 1,000 men will be affected here by the order calling a strike at all plants of the Aluminum Company of America.

Plant and union officials were preparing for an emergency, but no trouble was expected.

Frank R. Myers, secretary of the Massena Aluminum Workers Union, said union leaders were confident their orders to avoid violence would be followed.

Workers Await Strike Order at Baden, N. C.

Baden, N. C., Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Workers in the local plant of the Aluminum Co. of America tonight awaited official orders for a strike to come from union headquarters.

C. M. Hathcock, president of the local chapter of the Aluminum Workers Council, said he had heard radio reports of the strike order and was expecting official instructions momentarily. The local plant employs about 425 men.

Board Rejects Gen. Johnson's Donovan 'Brief'

Labor Mediators Refuse Written Statement; Peck, Coe Clash.

cient one day doesn't mean that you may be efficient the next."

"That's a downright lie!" Dr. Peck shouted.

Immediately afterward he took the stand to contradict Coe's testimony.

It was Dr. Peck who provided the charges of inefficiency and absence from duty upon which Gen. Johnson asserted he dismissed Donovan last June. Donovan had been an employe of the Labor Advisory board.

Although the hearing was admittedly a test case of the famed Section 7A of the National industrial recovery act, most of testimony was concerned with the events of an explosive visit a union delegation had with Gen. Johnson on June 18, shortly after Donovan was discharged.

The question of whether an earlier call the same day had been made between 11 and 11:15 a. m. or promptly at noon became the principal issue of the afternoon session.

Dr. Peck and other NRA officials insisted that the union delegation of 13 had called at Gen. Johnson's office shortly after 11 o'clock, had been told the administrator was not in, and then had created such a disturbance that Dr. Peck was called to persuade them to leave.

Attorneys for Donovan and the union called a dozen witnesses in rebuttal testimony in support of their firm contention that the delegation reached Gen. Johnson's office promptly at noon, in accordance with a previous appointment. Chairman Garrison refused to allow the union counsel to question Dr. Peck.

Gives Views on Unions.

Before the questioning was stopped, however, Dr. Peck said that he favored unions in Governmental departments "on the whole," but that he believed "they should operate a little differently."

The case of the NRA administration obviously was weakened by the absence of the principal witness, Gen. Johnson, and attorneys for Donovan and the union, chiefly John N. Finnerty, a figure in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, made the most of it.

Donovan, a 29-year-old Columbia University graduate, as a witness related in detail his experiences with the Labor Advisory Board and the events which subsequently led to his dismissal by Gen. Johnson.

He recounted that his suggestions relative to the wage and hour provisions of the paper and pulp code were so pleasing to the Labor Department that the were incorporated in the final document signed by the President.

"And this is the man Gen. Johnson fired for inefficiency," Finnerty commented.

Garrett Scott, chief NRA counsel, sought to exclude some of Donovan's testimony on the ground that it was irrelevant, but Chairman Garrison overruled his objection, explaining that the board wanted to hear all testimony.

Donovan also related in detail his activities as head of the NRA Local, No. 91, of the American Federation of Government Employes, in behalf of Mrs. Nancy Luke, a stencil cutter, who had been discharged upon recommendation of Bradish Carroll, chief clerk of NRA.

When Donovan was discharged later, Mrs. Luke was reinstated in the NRA.

Experience Related.

Following Donovan's testimony, Miss Margaret Stabler, secretary of the Labor Advisory Board and secretary of the NRA union, told of the delegation's experiences when it finally obtained an audience with Gen. Johnson to protest against Donovan's dismissal.

"I don't have to explain to you or anyone else why I fire any of my employes," Gen. Johnson was quoted as saying.

The administrator thereupon threatened to discharge two other union workers and complained about the activities of the union during the Government working hours, Miss Stabler said.

At one point Gen. Johnson threatened to throw the leader of the delegation "out on his ear" for arguing with him, the witness stated.

A half dozen other witnesses were called to corroborate Miss Stabler's testimony.

At the conclusion of the hearing Chairman Garrison said that the board may ask for further testimony after studying the transcript and explained that the case would be held open for the time. Counsel for Donovan stated that he would not close his case until it was determined whether Gen. Johnson would testify.

The meeting of the joint committee for unity of Government employes, scheduled for this afternoon at the Ebbitt Hotel, has been postponed until Monday. The committee is to consider the dismissal of John L. Donovan, head of the NRA Employes Union.

'Kidnap' Romance Goes on Rocks

Flying Actress Abandons Film Dance Director.

Hollywood, Aug. 10 (AP). — The "kidnaping" romance of R. C. (Dapper Danny) Dowling, film dance director, and Marjorie Crawford, flying actress, apparently blew up today, but whether there would be a divorce was uncertain.

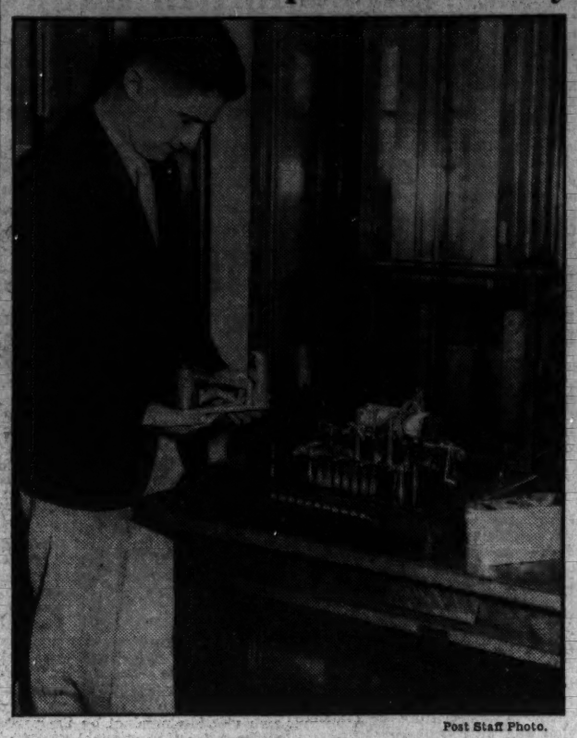

"She has gone away somewhere," said J. Thomas Russell, Dowling's attorney. "She will file suit for divorce, but I don't know where."

Less than two months ago, Mrs. Dowling, then Marjorie Crawford, testified at Dowling's preliminary hearing on a charge of kidnaping her.

"He kidnaped me," she charged, "and took me to Yuma, Ariz., at the point of a pistol. Then he tried to force me to marry him."

After their marriage the kidnap charge was dropped.

"We Must Have Weather" Refrain Keeps Bureau Busy

The tiny and the huge in reporting the weather. Atwood L. Kessler holds a balloon meterograph in his hand while examining a quadruple register, which weighs about 150 times as much as the other.

Drought Placed Terrific Strain on Query Department.

Weather.

It's never done, it's never over, so there's no reason to be surprised that business is always good with the United States Weather Bureau. Right now, though, it is especially good due to the Western drought.

"That's the way it goes," said Dr. Charles C. Clark, assistant chief, as he scanned the Midwest general forecast telegraphed yesterday from Chicago. "When weather conditions are calm and normal, people just take our work for granted. Let there come a drought, a hurricane, a prolonged rainy spell or anything out of the ordinary and we are almost swamped with queries."

Drought Strains Facilities.

The drought and record-breaking temperatures in the West have placed a terrific strain on the bureau, unrelieved by any emergency measures such as increasing personnel.

Requests for weather information, many so beseeching they are pathetic, are pouring in by the thousands. Cattlemen in Fort Worth, merchants in St. Louis, farmers in Iowa—all want to know the same thing:

"When will this terrible drought end?"

Dr. Willis R. Gregg, bureau chief, and his division heads pore over latest readings and compare them with "past performances" but venture no long-range forecasts on the drought or anything else.

"Thirty-six hours ahead, that's as far as we go," is what you'll get in reply if you ask whether there's a cold winter ahead or even whether fair skies can be expected for that box-lunch social three days hence.

One of the busiest of all workers in the group of red buildings at Twenty-fourth and M streets, which is the Nation's weather diagnostic center, is Joseph B. Kincer, climatologist. His desk is a shambles of reports, figures, letters, statistics, graphs and charts.

"For six weeks," he says, "I've scarcely known whether I'm coming or going."

"Doctor" Kept Busy.

Downstairs and across the court is another divisional chief, Benjamin C. Kadel, who plays doctor to the Weather Bureau's hundreds of various types of instruments.

Not only the instruments of the Washington station are repaired and calibrated in his laboratory but also those used in 190 "first order" bureaus and about 4,500 cooperative stations throughout the country.

Most versatile of them all is the quadruple register, or meteorograph, which makes a continuous registration of the four principal weather elements: wind velocity, wind direction, rainfall and duration of sunshine.

Not used as much as it was before airplanes took over its function is the balloon meteorograph, a small aluminum mechanism weighing about 6 ounces which records temperature, pressure and humidity. When the little observation balloon bursts, after reaching its "ceiling," the instrument parachutes to earth carrying a tag requesting that the finder return it to the weather station and receive a reward.

Another interesting specimen in Kadel's laboratory is the pressure tube anemometer which registers sharp gusts. As the wind strikes the cup-like receiver on the roof, its force is borne down a tube and into a tank partly filled with water. At the top bobs a copper float, to which is connected a recording indicator. The sharper the gust, the higher will the float rise and the greater will be the velocity recording.

An interesting business, gauging the weather, if not exactly a new one. A philosopher named Aristotle pioneered in it more than 2,000 years ago.

He even wrote a book on meteorology which was a standard text for many centuries.

Heat Fatal to 15 More in Midwest

tense heat wave in all but a few States.

During the day the temperature dropped from its three-figure highs in all the Midcontinent States, except Missouri and Kansas.

Driven by a sun which blazed in cloudless skies, the mercury climbed again to marks of 109 and 107 in those long-suffering States and approached 100 in lower Illinois. Fifteen more heat fatalities were reported by the Associated Press, 7 in St. Louis, bringing the summer's total to 407; 1 in Jefferson City, Mo.; 4 in Kansas City, 2 in Chicago and 1 in Michigan.

Topeka Reports 109.

The hottest town in the plains was Topeka, Kans., where noon found the mercury at 109 degrees, the highest reading ever reported for that time of day, and within 2 degrees of an all-time heat mark.

In Washington, Osborne Spriggs, 34, of the 300 block of Fifty-ninth street northeast, an employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co., was overcome at Seventeenth and K streets northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said his condition was undetermined.

Excessive humidity caused suffering in many sections. A relative humidity of 98 was recorded in New York at one reading. Muggy weather also prevailed in parts of Michigan.

Dodge Park Man Killed in Crash

Floyd Chamberlain Dies as Auto Hits Truck.

Floyd Chamberlain, 32, of Dodge Park, Md., was killed yesterday when an automobile struck his truck, parked along the Baltimore boulevard at Muirkirk.

David W. Gibson, 28, of the 4900 block Quarles street northeast, who was with Chamberlain, was treated at Casualty Hospital for minor injuries. Both were employes of an outdoor advertising concern.

Police arrested Robert Hecht, 45, of Atlanta, Ga., who they said was driving the automobile, on a reckless driving charge. Carl Booth, also of Atlanta and a passenger in the Hecht car, was held as a witness.

Hecht was released on $1,000 bond. Booth posted $150. An inquest will be held by Acting Coroner George S Philips at Berwyn tonight.

Red Men Try Their 'Last Resort' Ceremony in Plea to Rain Gods

Geary, Okla., Aug. 10 (AP).—The sun god glared today.

His flails beat mercilessly on 800 or more bronzed figures on the banks of the North Canadian River —"Big Water" to the Indian, but only a trickle now.

Venerable red men became leaping, painted figures in supplication to the rain gods.

It was the lurid animal lodge ceremony of the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, all but forgotten, a last resort in times of great stress.

The climax, a huge rain ceremonial, will be tomorrow morning. All day today, all night tonight, the plains Indians stamped and writhed through preliminary dances and rites.

There is no written ritual for the dance. The old chiefs must remember every move. They must remember well, for the animal dance has been performed but twice in the last generation.

The last time was seven years ago. For three days after the ritual the river bottoms were flooded, they say.

There has been no rain here for weeks on weeks. The "Big Water" is at the lowest stage in 20 years; the sun glares on.

Williams Says Cows Are Being Shipped From Drought Areas.

With the dual aim of taking cattle out of the drought area and of preparing for a winter of need, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, in cooperation with two other Federal agencies, is engaged in the largest food conservation operation in this country's history, Acting Administrator Aubrey Williams announced yesterday.

He said cattle from the drought area are being processed into canned beef and veal sides at the rate of 51,000 a day. Thousands of cans are being turned out of packing plants hourly for distribution among the unemployed.

The acting administrator added the Agricultural Administration has stepped up its emergency cattle-buying program as a drought relief measure, and the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation is shipping the cattle out of the drought States at the rate of 40,000 to 50,000 daily.

Approximately 12,000 beef cattle are being slaughtered and processed daily in packing plants operated in 20 States either wholly or in part as relief projects. Commercial packers are processing and canning approximately 39,000 head a day on orders from the Federal Government.

Declaring that the food-processing activities of the Federal and State relief administrations are "carried on as an emergency measure," Mr. Williams denied there is any "competition with existing commercial plants."

He explained the policy of the FERA to be that "wherever the facilities of a commercial plant are available those facilities are to be leased by the State relief administration. The supervisory force of the commercial plant is to be retained, but the plant is to be manned by workers taken from the relief rolls."

Where commercial plants are not operating to capacity, part of the plant may be leased and relief workers used under competent supervision.

Heat Slashes Canada Crops

Condition of Spring Wheat Cut 19 Per Cent in July From June 30.

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (AP).—The condition of field crops in Canada declined sharply during July, said a bulletin issued here today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

High temperatures and drought were responsible for the major portion of the decline. On the last day of the month the condition of spring wheat was 63 per cent, a drop of 19 per cent from June 30.

Wheat production is the lowest in the bureau's record dating from 1908. Total yield is 7,022,000 bushels.

With regard to the prairie provinces, the Bulletin says that during the first ten days of August the weather has been mostly hot and dry and further crop damage has occurred, especially to late-sown crops. The dry weather during July caused premature ripening in many areas and harvesting is under way in the southern districts of the western provinces. During the first week of August, precipitation has been more than general throughout Ontario and late crops, which had reached a precarious stage, have benefited.

Noticeable declines in crops were reported from Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Ontario. In New Brunswick, Quebec and British Columbia the condition of field crops was fairly well in line with the condition reported at the end of June.

Hundreds Flee Flood; Two Dead

were flooded early this morning. Ten houses in the little village of Kilgore in Carter County were inundated by Williams Creek. Many others were flooded higher up the stream.

Both upper and lower Stinson Creeks were far out of their banks east of the town of Grayson. Farmhouses in that vicinity were flooded, crops were destroyed and outbuildings washed away.

U. S. Highway No. 60 through the two counties was under water over much of its course and everywhere was strewn with debris from the storm. Overflow waters of Triplett Creek near Morehead covered the highway 3 feet in places, halting traffic.

Damage variously estimated at $50,000 to $200,000 was done to the General Refractories Co. plant at Olive Hill when flood waters from Tygarts Creek washed out nine burning kilns.

Farmers in Rowan County, whose crops already had suffered from too much rain, reported potatoes and other crops probably will be a total loss.

Four houses and a barber shop at Grahn, near Olive Hill, were washed away. The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Co.'s lines were reported being washed out at Fultz.

All communication lines were cut off from Olive Hill this afternoon. News of the disaster came from people who were able to get through on the highway to Morehead. Rain continued to fall in the flood area throughout the day.

balance" and that "there will be very real control in 1936."

Crop prospects, as a whole, the report disclosed, in the past month declined 11 per cent.

The report recalled that in the southern section of the drought belt some early corn developed ears before the weather became severe. Some fields escaped damage entirely.

Corn Drying Up.

"Over most of this area," the report disclosed, "corn has reached the tasseling stage without forming ears and in many fields the corn is drying up before more than a small fraction of the usual yield of fodder has been produced."

Concerning general conditions the report said:

"Growing conditions are poor practically everywhere except along the Atlantic Coast, in the Eastern cotton belt and in the Pacific Northwest.

"In a large area that includes most of Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas and some adjoining portions of Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico all growing crops and pastures were seriously hurt and most of the corn was scorched beyond recovery."

Other Crops Suffer.

Other late crops listed in the report as suffering from the drought included cotton, sorghums, buckwheat, alfalfa, emergency hay, potatoes, sugar beets, apples and truck crops.

The report termed loss of home gardens "a serious blow" to residents of the drought area.

Exceedingly low yields per acre were predicted for beans, cowpeas, peanuts, sugar beets and broom corn. The forecasts for oats, barley and flaxseed were below those of a month ago.

Pastures were reported as only 39.6 per cent of normal, as compared with 56.4 during the 1930 drought.

"Pastures are furnishing so little feed," the report concluded, "that many farmers are now feeding hay, corn fodder and other roughage that will be badly needed next winter."

Six Feared Dead In Canyon Flood

Five Bodies Are Recovered After Cloudburst.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 10 (AP).—Five bodies have been recovered from Twisting Bear Creek Canyon, which flooded after a cloudburst yesterday. The final toll may be six.

Deputy Sheriff Fred Loyd found a woman's body near Morrison, Colo., today and Sheriff James G. Birgins, jr., of Jefferson County, said he was virtually certain it was that of Mrs. J. H. Dieken, of Detroit.

A body, tentatively identified as that of her son, Gordon, 12, was one of the four others previously taken from the raging waters of Bear Creek.

The others were identified as the bodies of John Husband, 56, and his wife, 52, of Denver, and Charles M. Juhnke, 58, Denver tourist camp operator. Wendell Dieken, 15, another son, was missing.

Man Hangs Hour In Blazing Sun

Elevator Catches Worker at Top of Hotel.

Kansas City, Aug. 10 (AP).—A workman, accidentally caught in the wheels of an elevator shaft on top of the Astor Hotel, hung there an hour under today's blazing sun before police and firemen could rescue him. One of the rescuing party was overcome by the heat.

C. W. Fullerton, 54, went to the hotel to make repairs. As he worked someone set the elevator in motion and it moved just enough to catch the worker by the right arm between the wheel and the cable. His screams attracted occupants of the hotel.

When removed from his perilous perch Fullerton had a fracture of the right arm and was suffering from shock.

Wilford Shanks, 27, also a service man and fellow employe, was overcome and went to a hospital in the same ambulance with Fullerton.

Pair Posing as Guards Kill Farmer at Home

Salisbury, N. C., Aug. 10 (AP).—The slaying of William Reeves, 50, well-to-do farmer, by two men who last night came to his home and posed as convict guards hunting an escaped prisoner, presented a mystery today.

The pair fled. Sheriff J. H. Krider said that apparently robbery was not their motive. N. E. Waggoner, who lives in the county, was detained pending investigation. Waggoner owns an automobile similar to one in which two men were seen riding near Reeves' place shortly before he was slain.

Drought Area Farmers Let Cows Out on Shares

Paris, Mo., Aug. 10 (AP).—Many Monroe County farmers are "letting out their cows on shares" and others are giving them away because they can not feed the animals as a result of the drought. The common arrangement is for the owner to turn the cow over to someone who has feed. The latter gets the milk in return for feed.

III. A preference is stated for Plan III because "it retains more of the present routing, utilizes more of the existing track, requires the least expenditure for new track facilities, provides more service to the Triangle section and confines one-man-car operation to the lines where it now exists." Its estimated cost is approximately $915,000, which would be increased by 20 or 30 per cent if new tracks were laid while service is being maintained. This estimate does not include removal of present tracks.

Plan III, which is much like Plan I, calls for an extension of F street tracks across Fourteenth street into Fifteenth street and north through the financial district to H street. That there will be substantial opposition to the laying of tracks in this district already has become evident. Edward Clifford, former member of the Joint Transit Commission, characterized such a move yesterday as "a terrible mistake."

Already Choked By Traffic.

In a letter to People's Counsel William A. Roberts, Clifford declared that "there is no busier place in town now" than Fifteenth street between Pennsylvania avenue and H street. He called attention to the fact that the movement of peonle on business at the banks, the northward stream of buses and the constant presence of taxis presents a formidable obstacle to the laying of tracks in this area.

Plan I, which is estimated to cost $1,100,000 on the same basis of computation as Plan II, calls for the rerouting of the Mount Pleasant line into the proposed Fifteenth street trackage.

"The short line of the Mount Pleasant service," it states, "is extended from Fifth and F streets to Third street and Indiana avenue at the east and is routed to the Rock Creek Loop instead of the present Mount Pleasant Terminal. The Columbia line is extended west to provide service to Cabin John, Potomac Heights and the Potomac Park section.

"The Fourteenth street service is divided into three parts, one routed to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, another to Anacostia and the third to Eighth and F streets northeast, as at present. The present Takoma end of the Fourteenth street service is discontinued and service is supplied by buses."

Changes in Routes.

"The Eleventh street line is operated independently and terminates downtown on a new loop to be provided at Eleventh, E, Tenth and D streets. Service between Chevy Chase Circle and Chevy Chase Lake is supplied by an express bus service, operating from the lake to Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northeast. The New Jersey line remains practically unchanged, except at its southerly end, where it will operate over E, Fourth and G streets to Eighth and G streets southeast. The Florida avenue-Navy Yard line continues west on U street to a new loop to be provided at U, Eleventh, V and Tenth streets. The Georgia avenue service continues south on Seventh street instead of on Ninth street, to the loop at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue, and a new line operates from Seventh street and Florida avenue to the wharves."

Plan II provides for a connection between H and F streets by extending the tracks on H street east to Thirteenth street and constructing tracks on Thirteenth street between H and F. It also calls for extending the G street tracks west to connect with the Pennsylvania avenue tracks, which would permit abandoning the existing tracks on Fifteenth street between G street and Pennsylvania avenue and on Pennsylvania avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.

"The major routing change in Plan II," it is stated, "is connecting the Rosslyn territory with the Maryland avenue line. The Chevy Chase line is then routed via Connecticut avenue and Fourteenth street to Seventeenth and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, to replace the service now provided in that section by the Rosslyn line. The Fourteenth street service is divided into three parts, two of which operate to Eighth and F streets northeast, and the Navy Yard, respectively, as at present, while the third operates directly south on Fourteenth street to the Bureau of Engraving."

Few Bus Changes Needed.

"The Eleventh street line is connected with Anacostia instead of looping downtown as in Plan I. The New Jersey avenue line follows the same route as in Plan I, but terminates at First and E streets southeast instead of Eighth and G streets. The Florida avenue line continues west on U street, as in Plan I, but operates all the way to the Rock Creek loop, instead of terminating at Eleventh street, as in Plan I."

In Plan III, which is merely a modification of Plan I, "the Chevy Chase service operates via Connecticut avenue, Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue to a new loop at Sixth and Pennsylvania avenue. The Eleventh street line is operated to Anacostia."

On the subject of buses, it is stated that few new lines are needed and that changes should be made chiefly where buses are substituted for trolleys. In this connection, there is a recommendation for a line which would provide local 5-cent service from Chevy Chase Lake to Chevy Chase Circle, and an express, 10-cent service, to Thirteenth and E streets. It is suggested that patrons who desire to pay only the regular street car fare "should be accorded the right to change from the bus to the car where the local service terminates. Transfers would be issued and accepted on the bus line upon the payment of differentials in the rates of fare."

Service to Takoma Park.

The routes proposed to serve the Takoma territory are as follows: "From a stand on Laurel avenue south of Carroll, via Laurel, Cedar, Fifth, New Hampshire, Sherman, Florida, Ninth, D, Eighth and C streets to a stand on C street east of Ninth street; returning via Ninth, Florida, Sherman, New Hampshire, Fifth, Cedar, Carroll, Eastern avenue and Laurel."

"A second route operates from a stand on North Capitol north of Kennedy via North Capitol, Longfellow and Fifth, and thence downtown over the foregoing route, returning via Fifth, Kennedy and North Capitol."

Express service, on a straight 10-cent fare basis, would be operated south of Georgia and New Hampshire avenues. The same kind of transfer privileges are again suggested.

A new bus line is recommended to connect the Potomac Park section with the Triangle and business sections, which would operate from the circle at Twenty-third and Constitution avenue, along Constitution, Eleventh, Tenth and back to Constitution. A substitution of buses for the present Le Droit street car line is called for, as well as an extension of the present Four-and-a half street bus line.

Southeast Bus Service.

"It is proposed," says the report, "to reroute the Burleith-Trinidad bus line over P street between Wisconsin avenue and Twentieth street. Bus service in the southeast section of the city east of the Anacostia River has been the source of some complaint. The difficulty in this section is that the population is not sufficient to support a respectable bus service."

The South Washington line is extended easterly, half to the Hillcrest section and half to Anacostia via Minnesota avenue, and northerly on Twelfth street to Pennsylvania avenue. The East Washington interurban line is rerouted south of Florida avenue as follows: Via Florida, Thirteenth, East Capitol, Seventeenth, Massachusetts, Nineteenth, Potomac and Seventeenth to Seventeenth and Pennsylvania avenue.

"It was found," says the report, "that the existing roadways through Rock Creek Park do not permit a satisfactory bus route, for they are meandering roads with steep grades."

Georgian Flays Liquor Return At Clarendon

Mrs. Armour Declares Wets Teach There Is Little Harm in Drinking.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 500. Clarendon, Va.

Repeal of the eighteenth amendment has been a far greater failure than was prohibition, declared Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, of Georgia, principal speaker at the mass meeting held last night in the Clarendon Baptist Church under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"During the days of prohibition we were fighting the bootlegger to protect our homes; today the Federal Government is spending more money not to protect the American home, but to protect the legalized liquor traffic," Mrs. Armour asserted.

The greatest harm that liquor is doing today is that the wets are teaching there is no harm in beer or whisky, which is ruining the youth of our country, said Mrs. Armour.

"The day will come," she said, "that we will again have prohibition. Wherever there is an election on the question of local option now the drys are winning with large majorities," she declared.

Mrs. Frances Mabry, president of the Clarendon Union, presided and introduced the speaker.

Kemp to Head Delegation.

Arrangements are being completed whereby Fletcher Kemp, county school superintendent, principal of all the county schools and supervisors will attend the annual summer conference at the University of Virginia the week of August 27.

Among out-of-State speakers will be Charles W. Knudsen, professor of education, George Peabody College; R. L. Lyman, professor of English, University of Chicago, and H. L. Caswell, professor of education, George Peabody College.

Six to Get Diplomas.

Union services of Clarendon churches will be held at the Methodist Church tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The Rev. M. C. Stith, of Jacksonville, Fla., will preach.

Road Plea Won By Kensington

Northern Rock Creek Park Route Approved by Planning Board.

A long campaign waged by the Kensington (Md.) Chamber of Commerce, to secure improvement of Beech drive in the Maryland section of Rock Creek Park was ended yesterday when the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission voted to construct the road north of the creek rather than on a southern route previously approved.

In addition to serving as a park drive, the new highway also will be a feeder route to direct roads leading into northwest Washington, providing quick access to the city from points in Montgomery County not now reached by improved streets. It will connect Connecticut avenue with the Kensington-Capitol View road.

The commission will advertise for bids on the new project in the near future, it was announced. At the same time announcement was made that rustic furniture for the various picnic groves in the park has been purchased and is being put in place.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—A bomb explosion damaged the home of one workman and one under the house of another failed to explode early today in the vicinity of the Ames Baldwin Wyoming Shovel Co.'s plant, where a strike of 500 men has been under way for several weeks.

The bomb wrecked the front porch, damaged the walls and shattered windows of the dwelling of E. Powell. No one was injured. The fuse of the other bomb, made of a bundle of dynamite sticks, went out beneath the dwelling of M. E. Lott. Both have been working in the plant despite the strike.

"It is admitted fictitious names are being signed and the board can do nothing about it, so we are starting the new system with regulations that mean nothing and can not be enforced, just like we had under prohibition," remarked Delegate Hall, who has denounced the signature system as hypocritical.

The delegate also raised questions as to the overhead expense of the ABC stores and the number of employes operating out of Richmond headquarters.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—Will Dowell, 25-year-old former convict, entered a plea of self-defense when he came before Justice W. B. Colthurst here today.

Dowell was charged with murder after Herbert Davis, another ex-prisoner, died from bullet wounds.

Davis was fatally wounded in a row at Dowell's home on the outskirts of Charlottesville last Saturday. He died in University Hospital. Justice Colthurst sent the case to the October grand jury.

Planes Aiding Harbor Police In Harney Hunt

Four Air Scouts Patrolling Potomac for Body of Missing Officer.

With the motors of Army and Navy airplanes droning overhead, Harbor Precinct policemen yesterday continued the search for the body of their commander, Lieut. Edward T. Harney, who mysteriously disappeared from a cabin cruiser Wednesday.

Two planes each were volunteered by Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station, and throughout the day they cruised in a closed course up and down the Potomac River in the vicinity of Marshall Hall and Fort Humphreys.

Below were the policemen in boats, manipulating grappling hooks and dragging poles. Realization that the body, if submerged, should rise within 48 hours encouraged the searchers to almost feverish activity. Lieut. Harney is believed to have fallen from the craft between 3 p. m. and 7 p. m. Wednesday.

Lieut. Harney's family noticed he was ailing when he arose Wednesday, it was learned, and advised him not to take the pleasure jaunt he had planned with G. W. Boyd, 73, a retired detective and long-time friend. He kept the engagement, however, driving his car to the Harbor Precinct dock, parking it and then boarding the boat with Boyd, its owner.

Yesterday the car stood just as Lieut. Harney had left it. A few feet away, tied to the pier, was the cruiser.

Although some have said the Harbor Precinct commander was a poor swimmer, one of his men pointed out yesterday that on at least three occasions he had saved himself when thrown into the water. Once he caught his foot in the anchor line and went over the side. On another occasion he narrowly escaped death when the river boat was cut in two by the Charles Macalester, Mount Vernon steamer.

Sergt. C. C. Humphries was in charge of the river precinct yesterday. Today he will be relieved by Sergt. R. M. Cox, said Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, who will hold the post indefinitely.

Inspector Edwards emphasized that the department believed the drowning, if Lieut. Harney was drowned, was accidental. The Homicide Squad is not working on the case.

Fight Planned On Homestead

Prince Georges Board Head Raps Project at Beltsville.

Ormond W. Phair, president of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners, planned yesterday to lead a strenuous county-wide objection to the establishment of 200 Federal Government homesteads for colored people at Beltsville, Md.

He declared he intends to appeal to Senator Millard E. Tydings and Representative Stephen W. Gambrill.

"We do not want a large group of indigent colored families sent into the county unless the Federal Government is prepared to educate them and police them."

Nicholas Orem, superintendent of county schools, said the school board also would fight the Federal action.

The homesteads were to be set up as a permanent unit of the District of Columbia Transient Relief Bureau. The first group of colored men already have arrived at Beltsville.

West Virginia Farmer Dies of Auto Injuries

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—A fractured skull and other injuries suffered when struck by an automobile early yesterday caused the death today in a Clarksburg hospital of John Childers, 65, Bristol farmer.

The car was driven by F. R. Greathouse, 23, Weston garage employe, who surrendered to State police. An investigation is under way. Police were told the accident occurred when Childers attempted to hail the Greathouse car.

Fusion Party Leaders Deny Rift in Ranks

Republicans, Democrats Working in Complete Accord, They Say.

Rumors of dissension in fusion ranks yesterday brought denials from leaders of the party that there has been any rift between the Republicans and Democrats with regard to the allocation of the respective parties on the fusion party ticket.

Leaders declared the party ranks have solidified and are working together with much more esprit de corps than they had hoped to be able to inspire in so short a time. They stated they had checked the various precincts by telephone and found no grievances among the Democrats.

John W. Coffman, Republican leader of Takoma Park, Md., stated last night that he had contacted at least 40 Democrats by telephone and had found none of them to be at all alarmed by the report that the Republicans had captured all of the plums on the ticket. He could find no dissatisfaction with the set-up, he declared.

Fusion party heads declared selection of the candidates on the ticket was made in as fair and impartial a manner as they could devise. Delegates to the convention which indorsed the slate were selected from each election precinct by the party workers for that precinct. Half of the delegates were Reublican and half Progressive Democrats.

The slate had been selected by a committee which also was half-and-half and the indorsement of the slate by the convention was unanimous, they declared. The use of the convention eliminated the necessity for a primary in which approximately 12,000 voters would be eligible to participate.

Democratic Progressives pointed out that the Democratic anti-organization faction would have control of the Legislature if their party won the election and could stultify the Republican majority on the board of county commissioners by failing to pass legislation asked by the board.

Reports had been current that Democrats were dissatisfied with the places on the tickets awarded their party since the most and best paying places allegedly were allocated to Republican candidates.

3 New School Contracts Let

Bethesda Firm Successful Bidders on Projects in Montgomery.

Contracts on three more school projects in the Montgomery County (Md.) 15-point school construction program were awarded yesterday by the county board of education. Morris Bros., of Bethesda, were the low bidders on each of the projects.

The schools to be improved are the Sherwood High School at Sandy Spring, where a new four-room unit will be added at a cost of $29,985; Rockville, which will get an addition costing $32,250, and Damascus, where an addition is to cost $26,930.

Awarding of the contracts brought more than half of the projects in the program either actually under way or under contract. The program was launched early this year to complete the major school plan started in 1927 and carried on in units each year. The 1934 building construction will complete the county school plant as originally drafted, the largest units of which are new high school buildings in Bethesda and Silver Spring, both of which are under construction.

New Screen and Stage Bills, Opening Yesterday, Offer Wealth of Entertainment

W.C.Fields in Comedy Hit; Pickens Sisters at Earle; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE OLD FASHIONED WAY." Paramount picturization of a story by Charles Bogle, adapted to the screen by Garnett Weston and Jack Cunningham and starring W. C. Fields, with Baby Leroy, Judith Allen, Joe Morrison, Jan Duggan, Jack Mulhall, Clarence Wilson, Richard Carle, Tammany Young, Otis Harlan, Oscar Apfel and Lew Kelly. Directed by William Beaudine. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Hilariously funny as W. C. Fields and his screen associates are in "The Old Fashioned Way," it is the stage portion of the entertainment that dominates the new week's bill at Loew's Fox Theater. And what a stage show!

First, come the Six Yellow Jackets, four men and two young women, in a variety of solo and ensemble tap and acrobatic dances that culminate in a display of Arabian tumbling of a type that has not been seen since Hassan Ben Ali stopped sending his troupes over the major vaudeville circuits. The mere fact that so excellent an act opens the bill is sufficient evidence of the merit of what is yet to come.

Bunchuk Is a Master.

This implied preeminence is quickly realized when Yascha Bunchuk, distinguished violoncello virtuoso and conductor, comes upon the stage to play three numbers with the interpretative sense, touch and tone of the master. His first number was Schumann's "Traumerei," played with a lilting beauty that rekindled enthusiasm for an old favorite composition. In striking contrast was the "Scherzo" of Daniel Van Goens, played with a pizzicato sprightliness that revealed a flawless technique. For his third number, Bunchuk played one of his own compositions, a brief characteristic Russian descriptive piece, "Russian Accordion."

For the final offering of his individual interval on the stage, Bunchuk was joined by Max Zinder, first violin; Henri Sokolov, second violin, and Benjamin Sosnosky, viola, of the Fox orchestra, to render a special string quartet arrangement of that priceless theme song of budding romance, "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes"—a concluding number that was greeted with roars of applause.

The Mad Al Trahan.

Next, Al Trahan and the Countess Yukona Cameron in the familiar combination of song, piano and clowing. Mr. Trahan, who bills himself as the "American Paderoughski," is a musician of the first rank, whether as barytone vocalist or pianist. Mme. Cameron, while serving principally as a foil for the mad Trahan's buffoonery, is a soprano of no mean attainment. It is impossible to describe this act beyond the statement that it is a classic of its kind and stops the show cold in its tracks at every performance.

Following the Trahan-Cameron riot, come Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears, an orchestra of feminine instrumentalists, led by a dashing young platinum blonde, who uses no baton but leads largely with her shoulders and hips, stepping out midway of the proceedings to execute a tap dance of exceedingly mean dimensions. The orchestra is a clever aggregation, featuring the customary solists, vocal and instrumental, and performing the usual trick numbers, novelty arrangements, &c.

Many Specialty Artistes.

During the band turn, Miss Hutton introduces the Frazee Sisters, two redheaded harmonists in golden gowns to preserve the color scheme, who sing excitingly of a number of things; Joan Abbott, a "torch" singer from the "Scandals" and "Take a Chance," with a robust voice and a way with her, and Lucille Page, one of the modern theater's most extraordinary acrobatic dancers, last seen here with the "Vanities," in which she did her sensational "Dinosaur Dance."

To cap the climax, Yascha Bunchuk conducts the combined Fox and Hutton orchestras in a lengthy overture, "Gypsy Melodies," that moved an audience already weary from applauding to new frenzies of enthusiasm.

Here, I submit, is the most notable program of living entertainment ever presented on the stage of a Washington motion picture theater.

"The Old-Fashioned Way," is a comedy of "gags," hokum and flip lines made to order for the droll talents of its star. It was devised for the sole purpose of creating laughter and goes to any extreme to achieve that end. That it succeeds handsomely, whatever the means, is all that need be asked.

Mr. Fields Is Funny.

And it does succeed handsomely, with W. C. Fields as The Great McGonigle, a ham actor playing the tank towns around the gaslight circuits in those not so gay 90's. There is a sort of romance cooked up between a rich young collegian and The Great McGonigle's daughter, Betty, that leaves McGonigle doing a medicine pitch on Main street in a small town. Previously, however, he has found time to put on a fairly complete version of "The Drunkard" and to introduce his old vaudeville juggling act, with the tennis balls and the cigar boxes.

There is no particular form or definite continuity to "The Old-Fashioned Way," but what with Baby Leroy tweaking the Fieldian nose, dropping his watch in the syrup dish, hitting him in the eye with a lemon meringue pie and otherwise making himself a blessed little pest, the thing is packed with laughs, emanating, for the most part, from the lower anatomical regions.

Fields is at his best here and is given admirable support by Judith Allen, Joe Morrison, Miss Allen's persistent suitor; Jan Duggan, as a disappointed prima donna, and all of those named in the small-type paragraph preceding this review.

The Fox Movietone News completes a bill of practically 100 per cent entertainment value.

We Stars Have to Stick Together!

Marlene Dietrich and tiny Miss Shirley Temple seem to have something in common that amuses them both immensely. Frau Dietrich, in course of time, no doubt, will come along to the local screen in her new Josef Von Sternberg production of "The Scarlet Empress," another story of Catherine the Great, of Russia. Shirley is currently on view at the Columbia in "Baby, Take a Bow," re-reviewed on this page.

Earle

"HOUSEWIFE." Warner Bros. picturization of a story by Robert Lord and Lillie Hayward, adapted to the screen by Manuel Seff and Lillie Hayward, featuring George Brent, Bette Davis and Ann Dvorak, with John Halliday, Ruth Donnelly, Joseph Cawthorn, Hobart Cavanaugh, Robert Barrat and Phil Regan. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

The very personable and clever Pickens Sisters and four diversified acts of brightly entertaining vaudeville grace the Earle stage this week, while the screen labors under the burden of the old, old triangle, not one whit lightened by the mellowness of age or the combined efforts of three featured players, a splendid supporting cast and a modernized treatment that succeeds only in making it saponaceous enough for the recently awakened Purity League and a bit too vacuous for general consumption.

The marital tangle, in this instance, concerns Bill, Pat and Ann. Bill, played by George Brent, who is capable of doing so much better, is the husband and a bit of a mental flyweight. Pat, portrayed by Bette Davis, disguised in a fluttering coyness, is an admirer of Bill from their high school days, but has ascended to the heights of a $25,000-a-year advertising woman while Bill remains office manager of an advertising firm. Ann, nicely interpreted by Ann Dvorak, is the wife. The combined efforts of his wife and Pat kick Bill up the ladder of fame and success. Ann works directly but Pat exerts an insidious influence which goes practically unnoticed until Bill achieves his goal and then she stalks him in what is supposedly the modern manner.

Veddy, Veddy Modern.

In fact, everything is just too, too modern for words. Ann treats Pat as a welcome guest and Pat treats Ann like a stubborn child and they both treat Bill to a bad case of nerves. A few incidentals are thrown in for good measure • • • an accident to Ann's and Bill's young son; the distinguished gentleman standing on the sidelines waiting for Ann to secure her freedom and the comedy courtroom scene.

The minor premise seems to be that a mere housewife is very apt to lose her husband and the major premise seems built upon the proposition that a housewife wins in the end. What she wins is not very clear—Bill, not being much of a prize, in our estimation—but anyway, there it is, and you can draw your own conclusions.

Pickens Sisters Score.

On the stage, the Pickens do some pleasant numbers and succeed in being very decorative during the process. "Louisiana Hayride" and "St. Louis Blues" seem to be the favorites of their extensive repertoire.

Billy Costello, who is the voice of "Popeye, the Sailor" during Popeye's animated cartoon appearances, offers the voice of Popeye and a variety of other voices and noises in a fast-moving musical interlude. Park and Clifford present one of the neatest acrobatic acts of the variety stage. They prove that acrobatics need not be merely brawn, muscle and "allez-oops," but can combine all the niceties of rhythm and posture with strength and muscular control. Al Norman and "stooges" work old gags in a new manner and do some very nice footwork, besides.

Artists of Dance.

Enrico and Novello with three able assistant have labeled their presentation a "Miniature Terpsichorean Revue." Their dancing is delightfully graceful and their act contains a charm and dignity too often lacking in similar dancing interludes.

Audrey Sieber in a rainbow-array of pastel satin gowns announces the acts. Freddy Clark, with vocal assistance from Bert Granoff, introduces an overture of "Sweethearts on Parade." The Universal Newsreel is interpreted by Graham McNamee; a Grantland Rice "Sportlight" is narrated by Ted Husing and, as a special attraction, the delectable Miss Betty Boop appears in Poor Cinderella," made very real and colorful by the Cinecolor process.

Metropolitan

"THE PERSONALITY KID." Warner Bros. picturization of a story by Gene Towne and G. Graham Baker, featuring Pat O'Brien, Glenda Farrell, Claire Dodd and Thomas Jackson. Directed by Alan Crosland. Reviewed Friday morning by W. A. Whitney.

Whether Pat O'Brien's work here is interpreted as a sequel to his pugilistic efforts in "Here Comes the Navy" or merely in-between-times training for a return engagement at the Metropolitan next week, "The Personality Kid" turns out to be largely another of those periodic spasms anent the prize-fight racket.

However, the picture never seems to take its task very seriously, although Mr. O'Brien, living up to the spirit and the letter of the title, does expend serious thought and effort ultimately to become "the champ," which is only accomplished inferentially.

In Fixed Fights.

Ritz McCarty is a would-be fighter, managed by his wife, for the purpose of accumulating $25,000 to purchase a vineyard. To accomplish her ends, and for them both to quit the racket, she puts her man in several fixed matches. Ritzy, thinking them on the level, reneges when he accidentally learns the truth, and another household is broken up. Subsequently, the two are reunited through an approaching event of importance, and Ritzy, to get $100, agrees to throw a fight in the sixth round. But (there is always a "but" at this point), as the bout goes into the sixth round, it is learned it is a boy, and Ritzy forthwith kayo's his opponent. Meanwhile, a reporter has exposed the crookedness, and Ritzy's winning on merit reinstates him in the profession and all live happily—we hope—ever after.

Transparent Plot.

Sure, it is about as transparent a plot as there is, but there is plenty of action, lots of good dialogue and better acting. "The Personality Kid" is, foot after foot, Mr. O'Brien's picture. Notwithstanding his domination of the footage, Glenda Farrell, as the wife and manager, has a role that can by no means be ignored.

Of Mr. O'Brien, of course, one knows just what to expect in this sort of story—and he gives plenty. The crusading reporter is played by Thomas Jackson, with Henry O'Neill, Robert Gleckler and Arthur Vinton, as promoters. Claire Dodd is the menace who is not too forbidding.

The Supplementaries.

The auxiliary program presents a well-rounded bill of short subjects. Novelty, "The Stolen Melody," with Sigmund Spaeth continuing his tune-detecting; travelogue, "East Indies," with E. M. Newman discoursing briefly on the South Sea Islands; comedy, "Cracked Shots," with Tom Kennedy, Will Stanton and Helen Brock engaging in some free-for-all trap-shooting; news, the combined issues of the Paramount and Universal contributions to cinematized journalism.

Columbia

"BABY, TAKE A BOW." Fox picturization of a screen play by Philip Klein and E. E. Paramore, jr., starring Shirley Temple, with James Dunn, Claire Trevor, Ray Walker, Dorothy Libaire, Alan Dinehart and Ralf Harolde. Directed by Harry Lachman.

Following the formula employed with such success in "Little Miss Marker," this latest vehicle for the ingenuous talents of little Miss Shirley Temple once again pits the charm of babyhood against the sinister machinations of the underworld.

In "Baby, Take a Bow"—and the title is wholly irrelevant now that it is no longer necessary to identify tiny Miss Temple by references to "Stand Up and Cheer"—Shirley is cast as the daughter of an ex-convict who is perpetually hounded, as ex-convicts always are, by the police. Worse than that, a fellow-convict, whose stretch wasn't up so soon, finds himself loaded down with stolen jewels that are too "hot" to handle. So he "plants" them on his old pal of prison days by pretending to give little Shirley Ellison some pretty "beads" for her birthday.

Shirley Wins Day.

It is upon this incident in the story that the entire climacteric structure of the picture rests. Little Miss Ellison in the end, of course, outwits all of the adult minds pitted against her and wins the day for dad and mommy.

Shirley Temple in this subject, as in all others, continues to be her own unspoiled, precocious self. Her parents are played by James Dunn and Claire Trevor, with Miss Trevor having slightly the better of it.

The most effective bit of adult acting is contributed by Alan Dinehart, as the "insurance investigator" who keeps Jimmy Ellison continuously on the spot. Ralf Harolde, as the cracksman who can not get away with his swag, is approximately ominous at all times. The supporting cast is competent, although largely obscured by the greater prominence of the principals throughout the action.

The bill is completed by the customary short-reel subjects, including a new issue of the Paramount Sound News. N. B. B.

Palace

"HANDY ANDY." Fox picturization of Lewis Beach's play, "Merry Andrew," adapted to the screen by William Conselman and Henry Johnson, starring Will Rogers, supported by Peggy Wood, Mary Carlisle, Conchita Montenegro and Robert Taylor. Directed by David Butler. Reviewed second week, by Dorothea Lewis.

Will Rogers as Tarzan is not only unbelievable but uproarious and good box office.

For his jungle cry is certainly the high point of his film and largely responsible for keeping Handy Andy on hand a second week.

There is also a good deal of other and quieter fun in this story of the small-town druggist who retires to "relax," at the nagging insistence of his spouse, only to make them both miserable.

The coy Mr. Rogers is his ad libbing self, and his adventures are full of possibilities, not new but still funny. Peggy Wood is beautiful and affected as his affected wife. Conchita Montenegro stands punishment well as Will's Apache partner. Mary Carlisle is a cute trick, as Will's daughter, and Robert Taylor is very attractive as the young man she likes.

The whole business fits into the present "wholesome" trend of the poor, censored cinema without losing its rather obvious sense of humor.

Straight From the Studios

Her Tentative Films Junked, Mae Will Write New One; Fox Signs Henry B. Walthall to Term Contract; Newsy Notes From Hollywood.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Aug. 10.—All Mae West pictures, previously announced, apparently are in the discard and the star will write a brand-new narrative for herself. Just what, nobody seems to know, but one thing is assured, Mae will make it censor-proof. She had trouble enough with "The Belle of the Nineties" to last a long time, but the Hays office finally approved it.

R. C. SHERRIFF.

Mae says the next picture will be modern, to contrast with "Belle of the Nineties." The studio submitted stories to her, including "Me and the King" and "Queen of Sheba," but Mae didn't feel they would do so well at the present time.

Peg Sullavan Back.

Margaret Sullavan came in early today by plane, unheralded, and now the question arises as to what picture she is to play in first, so many have been named. It seems most likely that the selection will be "Within This Present," taken from the Margaret Ayer Barnes story, because R. C. Sherriff has completed a script on the picture which is very highly rated.

Cortez to Boards.

Ricardo Cortez will be headed East to do a stage play this fall. The title of the stage piece will be "Here's to Crime," which will be taken from "The Maltese Falcon." The title discloses a rather flaunting attitude, but the story is of the mystery variety.

Carroll Eastern-Minded.

Everything is practically settled for Earl Carroll to produce his next picture in the East instead of here. Production space has been obtained in the Paramount plant on Long Island.

Walthall Signs Up.

Henry Walthall, who has been free-lancing many a day, has just signed a term contract with Fox as the result of his excellent portrayal of the Colonel is "Judge Priest." He is now playing in "Bachelor of Arts," with Anita Louise and Tom Brown. Interesting Patricia Walthall, the veteran actor's daughter, is in the same company.

May Trips Around.

May Robson is becoming a real traveling star. She is now appearing in "Orchids and Onions" at Columbia. From there, she probably will go to RKO to do an original story by Wanda Tuchock, called "The Portrait of Mrs. Laura Bales." Following that she will likely return to her own studio, M-G-M, to make "The Old Nest."

Winnie Flashing Again.

Winnie Lightner will have a chance to score a bright comeback. She has just been assigned to "I'll Fix It," with Jack Holt, also Jack Mulhall, Edmund Burns and Fred Walton. Miss Lightner was a great success in such early-day talkies as "The Gold Diggers of Broadway."

Film Pageant In Review.

Charles Starrett and Marjorie Gateson have been added to the cast of "Just Out of College," with Franchot Tone and Jean Muir.

William Haines will be featured in a story of the Marines. He has just completed a film with all the Wampas baby stars.

Film Role Chance Won by Mistake

Cecilia Likely to Get Part Meant for Jean Parker.

Hollywood, Aug. 10 (AP).—A little mistake in identity by the secretary of Director Charles Brabin probably means Cecilia Parker will get a much-coveted role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Wicked Woman."

Brabin had virtually decided upon Jean Parker for the part and instructed his secretary to get in touch with the actress for a test.

The secretary, however, called Cecilia Parker and, when the latter appeared, Brabin decided to give her a test anyhow. The director was impressed with Cecilia Parker's work and announced today she probably will get the part.

Is It Sin to See 'It Ain't No Sin?'

Hollywood, Aug. 10 (AP).—The New York Censor Board, which swings probably the heaviest stick of the Nation's sundry censor boards, presumably will decide tomorrow whether 'tis a sin to see Mae West's "It Ain't No Sin."

The voluptuous screen star's latest, laundered by the studio and now entitled "Belle of the Nineties," was air-mailed to New York today for a preview.

The board rejected the film under its original title and in its original version.

"Halka" Opera To Open Here

Polish Singers Coming for U. S. Premiere in October.

Washington will have the distinction of being the first city in the United States to hear "Halka," the most famous of Polish operas. Arrangements for the production early in October are being made by Louis Kowalski, of New York, director of the company, who conferred here yesterday with the Polish Ambassador, Stanislaus Patek.

Mr. Kowalski intends to produce "Halka" in New York, Philadelphia and other cities, but the National Capital will have the honor of the American premiere. Several of the singers are coming from Poland especially for the opening in Washington.

Nicholas Karlash, basso, and Alexis Cherkassky, barytone, who were heard here last season in Chaikovski's "Mazeppa" in the Shubert-Belasco Theater, will have important parts in the performance.

"Halka," composed by Stanislaus Moniuszko (1820-1872), stands in relation to the lyric theater of Poland as Glinka's "A Life for the Czar" does to that of Russia. It is contemporaneous with Glinka's "Russlan and Ludmilla," Verdi's "Luisa Miller" in Italy, Meyerbeer's "Le Prophete" in France, and Wagner's "Tannhauser" in Germany.

Walter Grigaitis, formerly of the Philadelphia Civic Opera Company, will conduct the Washington production.

Film Table

Screen and stage bills will be presented on the following schedules at the theaters named.

Miss O'Sullivan To Wed Writer

Film Star Will Become Mrs. Farrow in Month.

Liverpool, Aug. 10 (AP).—Maureen O'Sullivan, motion picture star, left tonight for Ireland after announcing she expects to be married within a month to John Farrow, writer for the films.

Miss O'Sullivan, who was accompanied by her father, said:

"Our marriage will almost certainly take place in Dublin or London, but whether during my present month's visit to Ireland or on my return to this side, I can not say. She said she had no intention of leaving the films for "at least two years."

A reliable source in Dublin said Miss O'Sullivan and Farrow have been denied permission to marry in the pro-Cathedral there.

Farrow and Felice Lewin Farrow, daughter of the late Arthur Lewin, millionaire San Francisco mining man, were divorced. They have an 8-year-old child in the custody of Farrow's mother.

Whenever you hear anyone mention the "Result Number," he is talking about Post Classified Ads—National 4200.

U. S. to Fight Wampler Plea

Former D. C. Attorney to Ask Release From Federal Prison.

Baltimore, Aug. 10 (AP).—United States District Attorney Bernard J. Flynn announced today that efforts of T. Morris Wampler, former Washington attorney, to obtain his release from the Northwestern Federal prison, where he is serving 18 months for income tax evasion, would be opposed.

Flynn said he had assigned G. Randolph Aiken and Cornelius Munday, assistants, to Sunbury, Pa., next Tuesday to combat Wampler's habeas corpus petition in Federal court.

Wampler was convicted here last December on charges of filing false income tax returns for 1930 and 1931. He is seeking his release on the grounds that his conviction in Baltimore was illegal and that he should have been tried in the District of Columbia, where he resided and where he filed his returns.

Bullet Ends Life Of Film Director

George Hill, Ill After Crash, Held Suicide.

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 10 (AP). The unclad body of George William Hill, 39, director of many outstanding motion picture films, was found in the bedroom of his beach home here today by his valet. Police said it was a case of suicide, probably because of ill health. There was a bullet wound in the head.

Hill began his movie career as a stage hand under David W. Griffith, originator of the multi-reel film spectacles. He left no notes.

For two months the director had been receiving treatment for injuries received when he swerved his automobile into a telephone pole to avoid crashing into a group of children.

Hill was a former husband of Frances Marion, noted scenario writer.

Institute to Aid Adult Training Opens Monday

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 10.—Preparatory to launching a comprehensive program of adult education, the educational division of the FERA has scheduled at the University of Virginia here, beginning Monday, an eight-day training institute for personnel in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

While the institute is to be conducted primarily for emergency educational supervisors in the regional division, State school officials are urging the attendance of superintendents, emergency teachers and community relief and educational workers. Morning and afternoon sessions devoted to talks and discussions will be held.

The Federal program proposes to administer relief through vocational training, vocational rehabilitation, general adult education, and the teaching of illiterate to read and write. It will be carried on through the established school systems under supervision of the State departments of education. Many unemployed teachers will be engaged.

Started last year, emergency education will be resumed this fall on a broader scale, and with a closer relationship between Federal and State agencies.

Leaders to be Heard.

The program of the conference, arranged by Prof. John A. Rorer, head of extension teaching at the University of Virginia, and Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, includes daily talks by National and State educational leaders, followed by open forum discussions. Prof. Rorer will preside at each session.

C. F. Klinefelter, assistant director of the educational division of the FERA, will outline the scope of the program. Dr. Lewis A. Wilson, assistant commissioner of education for the State of New York, will discuss phases of the work in New York.

A report on emergency education in Virginia will be made by Dr. Hall. Maude E. Aiton, principal of the Webster Americanization School, will speak for the District of Columbia; G. H. Van Dorp, State supervisor, for Maryland, and W. W. Trent, State school superintendent, for West Virginia.

J. C. Wright, assistant commissioner for vocational education, United States Office of Education, will talk on vocational training. Round table discussions on emergency education in agriculture, industry and commerce will be led by J. D. Blackwell, director of emergency education in Maryland; W. S. Newman, supervisor of agricultural education in Virginia; Martha Creighton, of the Virginia Department of Education, and Lena M. Charter, of the Maryland Department of Education.

Sessions devoted to vocational rehabilitation will be led by John A. Kratz, chief of the vocational rehabilitation division of the United States Office of Education.

Other Speakers Listed.

Special speakers on general adult education include Wil Lou Gray, supervisor of adult schools in South Carolina; Jacques Ozanne, field representative of the American Association for Adult Education, and Ralph P. Bridgman, director of the National Council of Parent Education.

Talks on worker's education will be made by Dr. Hilda W. Smith, workers' education specialist for the FERA, and Jessie Smith Mosely, educational leader, of Richmond.

Under provisions of the program, nursery schools are to be established where needed. Dr. H. H. Anderson, of the educational division of the FERA, will explain the set-up for child health stations. Dr. B. B. Bagby, director of child health in Virginia, will discuss general health education.

Problems of illiteracy are to be discussed by Dr. Charles G. Maphis, dean of the University of Virginia summer school; Cora Wilson Stewart, of the National Illiteracy Crusade, Washington; Miss Erin Kohn, assistant supervisor of adult education in South Carolina.

Talks on the communities' part in the program of recreation and relief education will be made by Jerome H. Bentley, of the United States Office of Education; Claire McCarthy, director of recreational activities in Richmond, and Charles W. Dickinson, jr., of Richmond, president of the Virginia Library Association.

Emergency education for colored persons will be discussed by Dr. Ambrose Caliver, colored education specialist for the FERA.

Bogus Coin Suspect Held in Baltimore

Baltimore, Aug. 10 (Spl.).—Accused of making and passing counterfeit 50-cent pieces, Samuel Marzulia, 28, said by police to be a former convict from New Jersey, is held here for Fedreal authorities.

After the arrest, police and Federal agents raided a house in the northwestern suburbs and reported finding part of a counterfeiter's layout. Articles seized included several moulds for making half-dollar coins, the police said.

Virginia Gives 100-Mile Tract For U. S. Park

Governor and Other State Officials Sign Deeds for Shenandoah.

Richmond, Aug. 10 (AP).—Gov. George C. Peery today signed deeds by which the State of Virginia relinquishes to the Federal Government the 100-mile tract in eight northern counties which is to become the Shenandoah National Park, first large Federal park in the East.

Cosigners with the Governor were William E. Carson, chairman of the conservation and development commission; Richard A. Gilliam, secretary to the commission, and Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth.

The documents, three in number, to which the signatures and the great seal of the Commonwealth were attached, now go to Washington to the Department of the Interior.

Approved by Park Service.

They have already been approved by the Federal Park Service, Mr. Carson said. From the Interior Department they will go to the Attorney General of the United States and then to the President.

Those details will complete the transfer of the territory which, however, became subject to the Federal Government with the signing today. The deeds themselves are in the form of three leather-bound books. Accompanying them are eight folders of documents, which will be examined in Washington.

Land in Warren, Rappahannock, Page, Madison, Rockingham, Greene, Albemarle and Augusta Counties is affected. The transfer is permanent but some control will remain in State hands.

State Has Right to Tax.

The right to tax has been reserved by the Commonwealth as has the right to send Virginia sheriffs or other police officers into the park after fugitives who may seek refuge there. Residents within the park area will vote as citizens of Virginia.

Little ceremony attended the signing. Mr. Carson, Col. Gilliam and several other members and former members of the commission gathered in the anteroom to the Governor's office to await his return from lunch. As the Governor entered he was greeted by Mr. Carson.

"These documents have been approved by the Solicitor of the United States?" the Governor asked.

"They have been approved by the United States Park Service, your excellency," Mr. Carson replied.

Seating himself at the end of a long table the Governor wrote his name across the bottom of the three books, then handed a pen to Mr. Carson, who signed. Col. Gilliam then affixed his signature. Peter Saunders followed.

Home Requirements May Retard Project

Establishment of the Shenandoah National Park as a full-fledged Federal project must await acceptance by Secretary Ickes of the deeds signed yesterday by Gov. Peery of Virginia, the Associated Press reported.

The State acquired title to the property by condemnation and the deeds convey it from the State of Virginia to the National Government.

It has been suggested in official quarters that acceptance might be delayed by the slow pace taken in finding homes for poor residents of the mountain park area. The Subsistence Homestead Division hopes to place the present residents of the area in communities of small farms not far from the places where they have lived. However, the plans are still in a formative stage.

Field Training Is Resumed by District Guard

Private Appendicitis Victim Rushed to Hospital for Operation.

Cascade, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—Field training was resumed today by the District National Guard, which was forced to follow a rainy schedule yesterday. The skies were clear and the sun shining while the troops worked in the field, digging trenches, building bridges and studying reconnaissance reports.

The 121st Engineer Regiment spent the morning drilling and receiving instructions on the school of the soldier, while the afternoon was devoted to engineering problems. The Twenty-ninth Division special troops, training with the staff officers, completed details of the mobilization order. Stencil cutting and mimeographing of the order were under the direction of Master Sergt. George McCarthy, assisted by Staff Sergts William Bahre and Ernest Gonzales.

While marching with his company to Sabillasville, Md., Private Peter P. Panagopoulous, of the Twenty-ninth Military Police Company, was stricken with acute appendicitis. Lagging behind the troops, his condition was noticed by Lieut. Merrill D. Reich, commanding, who decided immediately to return to camp with the ill guardsman. A passing farmer, George Pryor, offered his truck as transportation, and Panagopoulous was taken to the camp infirmary, where he was examined by Maj. Joseph Greenlaw, and ordered to the Waynesboro, Pa., hospital. Dr. George Soule operated and announced the patient was out of danger.

Panagopoulous figured last Sunday in the accidental burning of Private Charles R. Fisher, who is now in Walter Reed Hospital at Washington.

Lieut. Col. J. Harry Wagner, division finance officer, was removed to the hospital for observation for kidney trouble. He will remain for the next few days for diagnosis.

New Deal Eclipses Election Issue in Sixth Virginia District

Rep. Clifton Woodrum, Democratic Incumbent, So Far Unopposed as Major Party Stronghold Talks Principally of NRA Benefits.

By C. B. Carr.

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.). There is going to be an election in November in the Sixth Virginia Congressional District for the purpose of selecting a member of the House of Representatives, but there is little talk among the voters regarding the contest which will develop provided the Republicans nominate a candidate to oppose Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Roanoke, standing for reelection.

Instead of hearing politics discussed in this section of the State, one hears political leaders and their followers talk religiously of the New Deal, the philosophy surrounding it which has developed within the district and the apparent benefit New Deal policies have brought to this area.

The Sixth Congressional District embodies two of the larger cities of the State—Lynchburg and Roanoke. The smaller cities of Radford and Clifton Forge and the counties of Campbell, Bedford, Roanoke, Montgomery, Floyd, Craig, Botetourt and Alleghany complete the political division. The district is the home of Senator Carter Glass.

Wrapped in Lethargy.

Both Republican and Democratic political leaders seem to agree that at this date politics are wrapped in a sort of lethargy. Developments so far include only the renomination of Mr. Woodrum. In Republican circles, it is said, the party is considering a district convention for the purpose of selecting a candidate to oppose Woodrum.

Tentative plans call for the convention to be held at Roanoke, but the date has not been definitely announced. The party leaders realize, however, that if a candidate is to be selected to oppose Mr. Woodrum, he must be picked before September 6, as Virginia laws require that candidates file 60 days prior to the election. The general election will be held November 6.

Few Republican leaders will express themselves on the matter of opposing Woodrum. The Sixth District is normally Democratic by a large majority. Not since the Reconstruction days following the Civil War has the Republican party won a Congressional contest in this district. In addition, there are a number of other factors entering into the general political situation this year.

One of these is the large Federal patronage the district has enjoyed under Representative Woodrum since 1933. Such patronage, Republican and Democratic leaders alike will agree, has strengthened the Democratic position in some respects, but it is also pointed out there are "plenty of disappointed office-seekers in the Sixth District." Keen interest is being manifested by Republican leaders in the stand these disappointed office-seekers will take in the November election.

New Deal Popular.

Another factor lies in the fact that throughout the district many business men will state that New Deal measures have been popular to a large degree. In Lynchburg, for example, L. P. Mann, secretary of the Retail Merchants Association, declared that in his opinion New Deal measures have been of substantial benefit there. Mr. Mann pointed out that a check-up of retail store sales this year indicates they are from 15 to 40 per cent above last year. He also declared the shoe factories of Lynchburg, one of the principal industries, are operating on a nearly normal basis and that the city's employment situation is considered generally good. There has been no difficulty with NRA code operations in Lynchburg, he added.

In Roanoke, business men also believe New Deal measures have helped the city. Here the general employment situation is reported good. Most of Roanoke's industries are operating on a nearly normal basis and merchants are generally agreed that the buying power of the consumer is much higher than a year ago.

But notwithstanding the apparent popularity of the New Deal, many persons in the district appear to agree whole-heartedly with Senator Glass that "pay day is coming" insofar as Federal relief grants are concerned. Mr. Woodrum, in a recent speech said it is true huge sums of money are being spent by the Federal Government for relief, but that when prosperity returns "pay day" will not be as bad as some think. This statement has offered food for though for voters in the district, politicians noted today, and around it may be woven other issues to offer the Republicans something concrete on which to formulate plans for a battle in November. A number of Republican politicians are of the opinion that the program involving huge expenditures of the taxpayers' money is not so popular with the rank and file of Sixth District voters.

Republican Timber Scarce.

Republican timber for the Congressional nomination in this district is said to be scarce. One leader seemed to think there are but three outstanding party members of the district who might consider the nomination. One is T. X. Parsons, of Roanoke, attorney and former law partner of Mr. Woodrum. Ted Dalton, Radford attorney, also is being mentioned prominently and there is said to be some support back of Mrs. Felix Parker, Roanoke, one of the vice chairmen of the Republican State Central Committee. Fred W. McWane, Lynchburg, former secretary of the State Central Committee, one-time candidate for the Congressional post from this district and 1933 Republican candidate for Governor, would not consider the nomination, his friends say, because of ill health and the pressure of business.

While some conservative members of the party are said to favor the idea of not naming a candidate against Woodrum this year, the younger and more militant element is reported anxious for one. One of the impelling reasons for a candidate this year, in the minds of the young party members, is said to lie in the changes made by the Virginia Congressional redistricting act of 1934. By this act, Alleghany, Botetourt and Craig Counties were taken out of the Tenth District and combined with the Sixth District, in which they will vote for the first time this fall.

Alleghany County is said to be normally Republican. In Botetourt there is a large "floater" vote which either party has been able to sway, while in Craig County the Democratic majority is usually small. The younger Republicans hold the opinion that the November election will be an excellent opportunity to get the new part of the district lined up with the old district organization through the medium of a Congressional candidate. This line of argument, both the older and younger Republicans seem to agree, may result in the growth of an aggressive Republican campaign this fall out of an unusual midsummer lull.

Drought Relief Cattle Arrive At Frederick

First Shipment of 450 Steers From West Sent Maryland County.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—One hundred and sixty Western steers branded with the Government "r" for relief, arrived in Frederick late Wednesday night and after being inspected were consigned yesterday in allotments of from 15 to 50 to farmers who will graze them for three months.

The consignment was the first of 450 shorthorns and Herefords listed for Frederick County from the drought-stricken Western areas.

The cattle were shipped directly from the Chicago stockyards and had been in transit about four days. Some looked fairly well, others showed lack of natural pasturage, but none was emaciated. While Frederick County pastures in most every locality have suffered from drought the cattle are assured of very much better grazing here than on the parched Western acres. At the end of three months the cattle will be slaughtered for relief purposes.

The remainder of the consignment for Frederick County is expected soon.

Rain Helps Cattle Demand.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.). With pastures revived by recent rains here, Washington County farmers have made additional applications for cattle from the Middle Western drought-stricken sections. County Farm Agent Milton D. Moore said he had received applications for 600 head.

Three carloads of the steers, applied for several weeks ago, are scheduled to arrive within a few days.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.). The Allegany County Farm Bureau has announced that arrangements have been made for the care and pasturage of the drought-stricken cattle to be shipped into this section within the next ten days.

Gordonsville, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.). Two carloads of cattle, 90 head, from the Dakotas, were unloaded here yesterday and taken to the Inglewood farm, 2 miles southwest of the town, where they will be pastured for the next 60 to 90 days.

This is the second shipment that has come to Orange County. The first lot, 217 head, are being pastured on the A. B. Taliaferro farm, Mount Sharon. It is understood a meat-packing plant will be established at Charlottesville, where the cattle probably will be slaughtered.

Like Accidents Kill Father, Son Six Years Apart

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—Hammond Spielman, 40, farmer, of near here, died yesterday in the same manner his father died six years ago. He bled to death before a physician could reach him.

Hammond, reaching for an onion to eat with his supper, stumbled over a chair and fell upon a butcher knife he had in his hand. Not realizing the seriousness of his injuries, he walked a quarter of a mile to a neighbor's home to summon a physician, but bled to death before the doctor arrived. The knife punctured the liver and right lung.

Peter Spielman, his father, was thrown through the windshield of his car, the glass severing the jugular vein and he bled to death.

An inquest found Hammond's death accidental.

Wallace to Bar Western Grain Dump in East

Will Do All He Can to Prevent Price Slide, He Writes.

Harrisonburg, W. Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in a letter to Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, declared the Agriculture Department will do everything in its power to facilitate the distribution of the Northwest Pacific wheat surplus in the East, "with the least possible adverse effect upon wheat prices."

Robertson made public here today the correspondence he has had with Secretary Wallace over the low Virginia price of wheat, compared with prices elsewhere.

Secretary Wallace, in his letter to Maj. Robertson, said:

"There are several factors which enter into the marketing and milling of wheat in your section. First, the country grain elevator code which specifies that any mill or elevator accepting wheat for storage or for resale, comes under the provision of that code. No rate of storage is specified.

"Some flour mills, therefore, in order to avoid the requirements of the grain elevator code, will have to make minor changes so as to not to come under the definition as a member of that industry.

"Second, there is the wheat-flour milling code. This makes no mention of wheat and no price fixing is set up either for wheat or flour.

"A third factor is the possible competition of wheat from the Pacific Coast. At the present time that wheat is being held at about the level of Eastern prices, water and inland freight considered. There is admittedly a surplus of wheat in the North Pacific Coast which should be absorbed in the Eastern sections of the country. It is the purpose of the department, so far as it lies within its power, to facilitate the distribution of this surplus with the least possible adverse effect upon wheat prces.

"Finally, it should be noted that wheat producers who cooperate with the Administration in the acreage-production program are receiving benefit payments, which, added to the cash prices which their wheat is now bringing, gives them returns on the domestically consumed portion of their crop considerably in excess of the parity price specified in the act."

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, yesterday asked Secretary Wallace's office to investigate causes of low wheat prices on the Eastern grain markets, the Associated Press reported.

He furnished data given him by the Piedmont Millers Association and other agencies, showing that higher prices now are being obtained in Chicago and the Middle Western markets than those at Richmond, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The department suggested tentatively that it might be due to a difference in the quality of the grain. Byrd said the department officials agreed to go into the matter.

Miss Dorothy Duggan's Art Shown in New York

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.). Miss Dorothy Duggan, member of the faculty of State Teachers College, is among the 70 students of the Art Students' League whose work was chosen for exhibition in New York.

Miss Duggan has been a pupil of Harry Sterner, studying etching and lithography. The exhibition will continue through August 24.

Wilbur Miller Enters Fight For U. S. Senate

Baltimore Republican to Make Race on Nice Ticket.

Baltimore, Aug. 10 (Spl.).—C. Wilbur Miller, Baltimore County Republican leader, today announced his candidacy for the nomination for United States Senator from Maryland on the ticket headed by Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for Governor.

In his announcement, Mr. Miller first stated that his candidacy "is not linked with any faction." Then he added:

"I have previously stated my indorsement of Mr. Nice for Governor, and have not moved from that position. His candidacy comes closer to getting back to the simple standards of the people than any other."

That was interpreted to mean that Mr. Miller will conduct his campaign with that of Mr. Nice and others on the Nice ticket.

Saturday Deadline.

With Saturday midnight as the deadline for candidates to file before the primary election, there was much activity in political circles in Maryland today, with numerous rumors of impending entries in both parties.

One unexpected setback for the Nice Republican forces was the refusal of United States Commissioner J. Frank Supplee to run for attorney general on the Nice ticket. Mr. Supplee said that, after considering the offer, he had decided to refuse.

Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt of Annapolis yesterday announced he will be a candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals on the Nice ticket. He is listed as one of the most consistent vote getters in the Republican ranks.

In the Democratic ranks, a revolt against the candidacy of William S. Gordy, jr., for renomination as State Comptroller on the Ritchie ticket was reported under way on the Eastern Shore. Lawrence P. Williams, of St. Marys County, Democratic leader in the House of Delegates, was said to be urged for the post, possibly on the Conley ticket.

Urged to Run.

It also was reported that a move was on foot to urge Emerson R. Grothers, of Cecil County, secretary of the State Senate, to run for the nomination of Clerk of the Court of Appeals in opposition to James A. Young, the incumbent.

In anticipation of a rush of candidates tomorrow, Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner 3d, announced today that his office will be open until midnight tomorrow to permit the filing of last-minute entries.

Tomorrow is a legal holiday in Maryland, proclaimed by Gov. Ritchie because of the Tercentenary regatta of the Maryland Yacht Club, but Mr. Winebrenner said he will disregard the holiday.

Senator Goldsborough Visits Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.). Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, seeking the Republican nomination for Governor, arrived in Washington County today. He stopped at Hancock and Clear Spring to meet constituents. Tonight he was given an informal reception by a group of supporters here.

The Senator tomorrow will visit most of the smaller towns. While in Garrett and Allegany County the Senator said he had received much encouragement in his campaign for the nomination.

The younger element of the party here has indorsed the candidacy of Harry Nice, Baltimore, also seeking the nomination.

Goldsborough's support in this county is expected to come from some of the older leaders.

There appeared much competition for almost every county elective office, with the exception of that of the House of Delegates. There has not been a single candidate of either party to file as yet and no intention of filing announced.

Candidates for other offices, however, continued to swamp the board of election of supervisors' office.

Harry A. Shafer filed yesterday for the Democratic nomination for register of wills, and Samuel C. Wroe for judge of the Orphans Court. E. Stuart Bushong, Democrat, a member of the House of Delegates, announced he would file for State's attorney. William Staub, Republican, assistant market master, has filed for sheriff.

Westminster, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.). Raymond L. Benson, Westminster, has filed as a Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates. Carroll S. Rinehart, Union Bridge, also has filed as a candidate for the House of Delegates, subject to the Republican primaries.

"Spirit" Subject Tomorrow In Christian Science Churches.

"Spirit" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Zachariah iv:6: "This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Among the citation which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "God is a Spirit: and they that worship Him must worship him in spirit and in truth." (John iv:24). The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit is not separate from God. Spirit is God." (Page 192).

Through Eyes of Amos

By William T. Ellis.

Nobody can be called a Bolshevik for quoting, as the truth for the times, the radical utterances which are the present assigned Sunday School Lesson. They are straight Bible truth, designed to make oppressors and exploiters squirm—and repent. In the rough, direct speech of a plain man of the soil, a shepherd peasant, they say all that the reformers of our own day are trying to express.

It has been a long wait for Amos. His brief prophecy was for dark ages the overlooked teaching of the Bible. Churchmen, and even the church herself, went on denying justice to the poor, and showing favor to the rich and powerful. Even in Great Britain's worst reigns, the corrupt king could always find a court preacher to condone his immoralities. In our own day, the church has dealt tenderly with offenders against the public rights; if they were rich and generous she labeled them "leading laymen."

Amos Comes to His Own.

Now, after more than 2,500 years, Amos has been discovered, by preachers, professors and social reformers. His passion for justice has infected all advocates of the New Day. The utterances born of his lonely meditations, as he tended his flock on the sterile hills around Tekoa, a dozen miles below Jerusalem, or as he laboriously climbed the sycamore trees to pinch the tiny figs that were the fare of the poor, are now resounding in legislative halls, in classrooms, from pulpits and from countless platforms and presses.

There is a field for solid thinking in the awesome truth that simple right is right in all ages and in all lands. The stern utterances of Amos were discussed as sensational news in the city gates of all Israel and Judah; and the common sense of the common people assented to them. Today, without having gone stale or lost a single sparkle of their local color, the old prophet's teachings are still the most important news of the day. "Let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as an everflowing stream" is still the last word concerning evil social conditions.

As Amos, an uncouth countryman visiting the towns, looked about him in Samaria and Bethel and Jerusalem, he saw that there existed a wide gulf between the personal character and private business practices of the prosperous and their public religious professions. Ceremonially scrupulous, and jealous of their high standing in the community, they were yet real robbers of the poor.

It is the distinction of this peasant-preacher that he laid bare, scathingly, the essential irreligiousness and unrighteousness of this condition. His burning invectives were hurled against those who "trample upon the poor and take exactions from him of wheat" . . . "that afflict the just, that take a bribe, and that turn aside the needy from their right." To all such, smug in their religious orthodoxy, Amos became the voice of Jehovah, to declare, "I hate, I despise your feasts, and I will take no delight in your solemn assemblies."

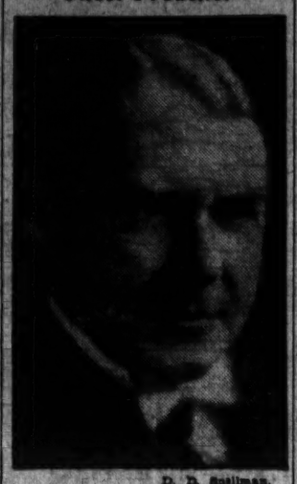

Back of All Progress.

Of course, all the teaching of Amos derived from his lofty conception of the nature of Jehovah. He perceived that the eternal qualities of justice, righteousness and benevolence are implicit in the very nature of the Supreme Being. So the Lord had revealed Himself to Moses. God is a great God, ruling over the nations, and not to be misled by pious frauds. Because God is incarnate truth and justice and love, He can not condone violations of these qualities among men.

Suppose we try to get hold of this overmastering truth as applied to our troubled today. We want prosperity and social stability and a new day and world peace. Behind all these objectives, however, lies the priority of simple righteousness. There is no use in trying to deceive ourselves into the belief that world peace or social tranquillity can be "arranged," so long as glaring injustices exist. Too many men are trying to bolster up the unbrotherly status quo. They want peace—but they also want to hold fast to their own privileges. Whereas, if Amos is right, there can be no peace until the clear will of God is done in maintaining righteousness among men.

That is the price we must pay for recovery. There is a reckoning to be made with the farmer and the workingman, of course; but there is a greater reckoning to be made with Him who sitteth above the heavens. Unless we, as a nation and as a world, are willing to submit ourselves to the exactions and inspirations of the living Lord we shall only blunder into worse and worse conditions.

Guest Preacher

D. D. Stellman.

THE REV. EDGAR DeWITT JONES, D. D., pastor of the Central Woodward Christian Church, Detroit, Mich., who will preach at the National City Christian Church for the next four Sundays in the absence of the minister, Dr. Raphael H. Miller.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, coal was once a new-fangled idea, frowned upon by authorities and utterly detested by the older conservative element.

The use of coal used to be a National issue in English government. Henry III in the thirteenth century gave his subjects in Newcastle, now famous mining district, the right to sell coal. As the use of it spread, opposition by the upper classes became more and more bitter until the king revoked his earlier order and ruled that only wood could be used for fuel. Edward II again changed the law, legalizing the use of coal.

This, however, did not end the dispute. Queen Elizabeth compromised, ordering that coal could be used in London at all times except when Parliament was in session. In this way the members of Parliament were not subjected to the "unhealthy" smoke while in town on business of government. When they were living at their country estates it made little difference to them about the smoke in London.

Hell is the name of a quaint village in Norway, attractive to American tourists who like to send postcards home postmarked "Hell." The word has no meaning in Norway, where the real word for hell is helvede.

Strangely enough, it gets rather cold in Hell in the winter, so "until hell freezes over" is probably no farther away than the first good cold snap of the coming Norwegian winter.

British Act to Expand Trade With Manchukuo

London, Aug. 10 (AP).—British commercial interests initiated an effort today to expand the empire's trade with Manchukuo.

It was stated officially that the federation of British industries is sending a private mission to the new Asiatic state. It was emphasized the mission will have no official connections, but it was stated that efforts to increase trade with Manchukuo "will receive every legitimate support."

Catholic Bishops Call Sun Baths Indecent

Brussels, Aug. 10 (AP).—Sun bathing on the beaches has been branded as incedent by the Roman Catholic bishops of Belgium.

It was learned today that they have prohibited their priests from visiting any of the numerous fashionable sea resorts where bathers are allowed to stroll about in unorthodox bathing suits. Several young Catholic organizations have pledged their members to abstain from visiting such resorts.

Radio Waves and Ripples

YOU may tear up your WMAL Breakfast Club membership certificates now.

The club, so to speak, has been disbanded, and will remain so as long as N. B. C.'s ban on phonograph record playing is in force.

In its place on WMAL this morning is another Breakfast Club, a live-talent program that N. B. C. has been serving from Chicago for several years.

Thus what in all probability was once the most popular morning program in town gives way to the network's change in policy. The WMAL Breakfast Club went on the air about two years ago. At one time membership certificates had been issued to some 10,000 listeners. Then the young man who is generally, though in some quarters reluctantly, accredited with making the show, packed up and went over to another station. Then began a long procession of "presidents."

A former student of journalism, Don McNeill, is the network successor of Godfrey, Douglas, McGrath et al. He acts as master of ceremonies for Jack Owens, the Merry Macs, the Morin Sisters, Mary Steele and Gale Page.

WMAL used to take the program occasionally in the days before it had a club of its own.

The shot that was heard around the world has very little, if anything, on the kiss that Bob Trout gave his wife when President Roosevelt's train stopped in Union Station yesterday.

Very glad to see the former Margaret Burt was Robert.

Very glad to see Robert was Margaret.

Smack!

It was only a matter of inches, the distance that separated Robert and Margaret and a WJSV microphone.

And that was a kiss that was heard from coast to coast on 90 stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System, even if a lot of people did think it was static.

NOT having heard 83 1-3 per cent of the material from which Columbia will pick a leading lady for Dick Powell next Thursday, we are not qualified even to guess the winner's name.

That's why we say Vera Van will win. Leading with our chin is our favorite summer diversion.

Our reason for thinking this is exceedingly simple, and was thought up with virtually no mental effort. That's why we like it.

From what Columbia's publicity department tells us about the other contestants, experience alone should be the factor that decides the audition in favor of Miss Van. With the possible exception of Washington's Helen Ault, the experience of the rest of the Powell aspirants goes no farther than occasional assignments on home-town programs.

Miss Van won the right to compete in the audition finals in New York. For some time she's been a network name. You may have heard her this week on the Fox stage bill.

Someone wants to say that Miss Van's a professional and that it isn't fair for her to be in the contest. That's the kind of a contest it was, open to professional and amateur alike. And anyway, if you don't mind our saying so, a professional is, after all, an amateur who became good enough for someone to want to pay for her work. And furthermore, they're all professionals. It's only a matter of degree.

Personally we hope Helen wins. We think she's a great gal.

FROM the standpoint of Columbia's publicity department and the sponsors of "Hollywood Hotel," we can see where maybe it would not be such a good idea if Miss Van won. Her name is familiar to a majority of radio listeners. How much greater the fan interest were the contest to go, say, to Irene Barclay, of Seattle, Wash., who "has had practically no radio experience," to say nothing of the space the publicity department would get in the papers.

The other winners:

Boston—Alice O'Leary, of Medford, Mass.; Pittsburgh — Betty Brunn, of Columbus, Ohio; Atlanta —Margaret Chesick, of Charlotte, N. C.; Chicago—Rowene Williams, of Chicago; St. Louis—Doris Shumate, of St. Louis; Dallas—Ludi Mai Sensabaugh, of Dallas; Denver, Zella Sexton, of Junction City; San Francisco—Betty Kelly, of San Francisco; Montreal—Dell Adams, of Windsor.

Ripples . . .

According to word from Vaughn de Leath's press agent, she is taking up Esperanto . . . just to be ready when the universal language gets a little more universal . . . he (the press agent) attributes it to Vaughn's wanting "to stray from the beaten radio path." . . . And according to word from the Columbia publicity department, Roanoke's Bill Huggins (also Washington's if you please) returned from a vacation in the Catskills "poison ivy stricken" . . . and the suggestion is made that possibly Bill knows the weed when he sees it, but was too lazy to care. . . . The agents for the Headliners variety show tomorrow are authority for the statement that the appearance of Col. Stoopnagle and Budd on the program does not mean that Columbia's ace comics are leaving the chain for N. B. C., all rumors to the contrary. . . . Honeyboy and Sassafras, of N. B. C., have broadcast in three countries . . . United States, Canada and Mexico . . . which may be a commentary on the universal appeal of the Negro dialectic. . . . A new phonograph company thinks Bob Crosby's voice, five tones lower than Bing's, perfect for recording . . . they've hired him as test singer. . . . George Reid, WOL's "One-Man Minstrel," is being groomed for A. B. S.'s expanding network.

Ten-gallon hat and steel guitar comprise the trade mark of Carson Robison, former Kansas and Oklahoma range rider, who now rides the air waves with his Buckaroos on C. B. S. Thursday nights.

"Only" Bondholders Hurt.

Senator Thomas, rejoicing at the thought that the nationalization of silver would bring more and cheaper money, said that "the producers like the farmers will be the ones to benefit. The ones hurt will be those possessing fixed investments, like the bondholding class."

The bondholders evidently are disposed to agree with the Senator that more monetary experimentation is not to their advantage. Government issues were sold heavily following announcement of the nationalization plan, which led many holders to fear that still more inflationary proposals are on the way. The failure of the Treasury to place a portion of the $150,000,000 issue of bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation provides another indication that investment support for Government promises to pay and for obligations guaranteed by the Government is weakening.

The public assumes that the Government credit is exceptionally strong when new offerings carrying low rates of interest are oversubscribed. They do not stop to reflect that Government issues today provide the chief outlet for the idle funds of banks and investment institutions in the absence of private financing. Neither do they understand the effect of the inflationary credit policies that have been pursued in creating an artificial demand for Government issues. Hence it requires some open manifestation of uneasiness on the part of investors and outright refusal to subscribe for issues bearing low rates of interest to focus attention upon the artificial character of the market.

Senator Thomas may openly rejoice at the shocks dealt to investment confidence by the succession of decrees affecting our currency system because he would probably prefer to have the Government finance its needs by turning to the printing presses. The Treasury, however, has been counting upon investors to lend their support to a campaign for financing home owners and farmers, in addition to providing funds to cover deficits on budgetary account. It certainly will not welcome unmistakable indications of a growing uneasiness among the group who represent "only" bondholders.

At The Home Plate.

Even in baseball, that game of sedulously fostered idolatry, few figures have, during their day, won greater personal popularity than Wilbert Robinson. He was a great player: his 1892 record of seven hits for a single game still stands, and many competent critics thought him the greatest catcher of history. He was a great manager, too, and a great coach, as the Baltimore Orioles learned when they were really a team and as other cities came to know as "Uncle Robbie" grew older, and heavier.

Yet if this pioneer among player-managers was these two things, he was something more. He was picturesque. He was a tradition. He embodies the best virtues of American professional sport. But, above everything else, he was a man who won, and won deservedly, the hearts of both his associates and his rivals. All lovers of a game which seems somehow to have passed its heyday loved him. All will regret that he has now for the last time circled the diamond and come "safe home."

Just A Gag.

We rather suspect that some one not far from the Auditorium has been pulling the District Commissioners' collective leg in the matter of this thing called a Walkathon. It seems to have been going on since the 30th of July and attracting about the attention that it deserves, which is next to nothing. Now suddenly some one complains that this is "human torture" and there is a bustle of moral indignation about the District Building.

So-called "endurance tests" of this kind are quite an ordinary racket. They have been going on for years all over the country and the procedure is always the same. It starts with modest announcement. It runs a week or so to a small gate. Then there is a complaint. This is followed by publicity. Then the game is on. The mayor, or what have you, says it must stop. The chief of police says he can't act because there isn't a law. The pastors preach, and there is a fuss—which packs the house.

What is always ignored is that no one has to go to these things and no one has to participate. But the authorities, cleverly manipulated by experts in publicity, act as barkers for the silly show and oxygenate a performance which otherwise would speedily die of its colossal inanity.

It is rather surprising, after all these years, that a supposedly sophisticated National Capital should get excited about what the rest of the country long ago has relegated to the limbo of such sports as miniature golf and flagpole sitting. That's where it belongs. But if there are in Washington people silly enough to want to see a "walkathon," or even to take part in it, we strongly suspect it is nobody's business but their own. After all it is something to have those who enjoy such pastimes even temporarily segregated.

The Traveler Returns.

It seems happily apparent that the President, now resuming his labors at the White House, has benefited physically from his seven weeks' trip of vacation, inquiry and exploration. That this should be the case has throughout his absence been the hope of all to whom Mr. Roosevelt's unquestioned courage, and gracious personality, have served as inspiration during a most trying period of National history. And they are legion.

But there seems equally little doubt that Mr. Roosevelt's philosophy of government, and his intellectual reaction to the problems of the day, have undergone no modification of importance as a result of his extended tour. When a man travels, as Emerson pointed out, he is more apt to find confirmation of old ideas than to receive enlightenment. Particularly is this the case with those who feel admirably, though not always justifiably, certain of themselves. In other words, it is a question whether Mr. Roosevelt's hope that his vacation would enable him to see the wood as a whole, with vision unobscured by individual trees, has been fulfilled.

The indications of nonfulfillment were emphasized by the President's speech on Thursday at Green Bay, a public utterance to which much care had obviously been given, and which was evidently designed to indicate complete executive satisfaction with present policy. This was pre-eminently an address which failed "to see the forest because of the thickness of the trees." And that which most obscured vision was the curious preoccupation of the President with what he calls "the old law of tooth and claw."

This business of the "old order," the "old deal," the "old law" and all the rest of it is fast becoming a perfect obsession with the Administration. Undoubtedly it is good platform, vote-getting stuff. But soon or late it will be desirable to lay a garland of posies, rather than a load of brickbats, on the tomb of the ancien regime, and squarely confront the question of how the New Deal is to be made workable.

For the bugaboo raised by the President about restoration of railroad rebates, impure foods, wildcat banking, watered stock and all the rest of it is simply beside the point. Regulation to prevent all these evils was in effect long before Mr. Roosevelt took office, and it is doubtful if a single responsible individual can be named who today stands for their restoration. Normal evolution has cleared away many of the abuses of the past. Normal evolution will continue to clear away those that remain, as long as the basic structure of our society remains sound.

The issue today is not between a ridiculous ogre entitled the "Old Deal" and a flaming archangel with "New Deal" patterned on its wings. And ceaseless reiteration of that soapbox theme can only lead to suspicion that it is put forward to distract attention from more humdrum realities. The basic issue which confronts the country is simply how we are to keep going without a constant excess of expenditure over income. For as long as the New Deal can only operate by drawing on National reserves stored up by generations of Old Dealers—as long as the New Order is not self-supporting—the achievement will remain one for which sober thinkers can not give unrestrained credit.

The world we live in is not really composed of dragons on the one hand and starry-eyed heroes on the other. It is a highly complicated and intricate civilization which will not function merely on self-righteous pronouncements. We are concerned, as the President rightly said, "with the multiplication of wealth through cooperative action." If that multiplication fails there will be little left for division by the New Deal.

Cash Preferred.

As an alternative to "staggered" pay days, proposed as a means of relieving congestion in banks and stores on the first and middle of each month, cash payment is strongly urged by spokesmen for low-salaried Government employes. There is much to be said for this plan from the point of view of the workers. Many of them earn too little to maintain a deposit account with a local bank. The loss of time, and the annoyance connected with efforts to obtain cash for their pay checks are often serious.

The plight of one newcomer to Washington, who was unable to exchange her check for cash because she had no established connections with a bank and was unable to identify herself satisfactorily, was graphically portrayed recently by a correspondent of The Post. Even when identification is not difficult, a great deal of trouble is involved in turning checks into cash either through banks or through stores that accept checks as an accommodation.

On the other hand, cash disbursements on an extensive scale would require the establishment of protective devices to prevent the pay roll robberies so frequent in large cities where workers are paid in cash. Petty thefts, already numerous, would probably increase rapidly, necessitating more adequate police protection than is now afforded in Washington. Such difficulties would be minimized, however, by limiting cash payments to those Government employes in the lowest paid classes. Or cash payments might be restricted to those who signified a real need for payment in that form.

Whatever the final solution may be, the system of payment now in force admittedly creates congestion and causes serious annoyance to large numbers of Government employes. Any change that necessitates a modification of the routine will bring official protests, no doubt. But the Government employes and the general public are entitled to be given a hearing in a matter which deeply concerns their comfort and convenience.

Undiscriminating Criticism.

The address delivered by Chairman Fletcher, of the Republican National Committee, before the Illinois State Convention of the party provides a conspicuous illustration of the kind of sweeping and unqualifiedly denunciatory attacks that have characterized much of the political opposition to New Deal policies. What Mr. Fletcher says about the extravagance, the waste and the futility of many of the plans that have been adopted to speed recovery is convincingly presented and supported by strong evidence. But the force of his indictment is seriously weakened by the negative, destructive and often highly exaggerated character of his criticism.

Opponents of the New Deal are not obligated, as its defenders have frequently asserted, to outline a substitute program in detail, or suggest a remedy for every form of economic ill that afflicts the country. Nevertheless, if they are genuinely concerned to bring about a modification or a reversal of policies which, in their opinion, threaten our economic and social stability, they must be discriminating critics, not mere political scolds.

By refusing to concede that the New Deal has brought any positive benefits whatever to the country, Mr. Fletcher implies that the whole structure ought to be demolished instead of being remodeled. That is an anarchistic program of action that few Americans would be prepared to indorse. The business man of the type described by President Roosevelt in his Wisconsin address, who wishes all regulatory restraints to be removed, is one of the very few who would applaud a decision to sweep away the NRA and all its works before any substitute plan had been devised. Certainly the irate farmers who resent bureaucratic interference would become still more disgruntled if they were, without warning, thrown back entirely upon their own resources.

The extravagant spending program that Chairman Fletcher attacks is undoubtedly a source of great danger to the public credit. It is not made less dangerous, however, by exaggerating the extent of the commitments or refusing to admit the inevitability of some of the emergency outlays. In short, general abandonment of the policies that Chairman Fletcher denounces as "weird experiments" is simply not possible under present conditions, as he must know. The country has been launched upon a recovery campaign from which retreat without previous preparation would be disastrous. The discriminating politician who is seeking public support for a helpful plan of action must be ready to indicate how gradual withdrawal from dangerously advanced positions can be effected.

Chairman Fletcher, however, simply insists that "the substitutes which the Administration is now offering for sound economic Governamental policies be abandoned and there be a return to common sense and Constitutional Government." This is negative advice that provides no basis for a program of positive action and effective political opposition. It merely invites sarcastic replies from the New Dealers whose policies are attacked.

Those Who Will Pay.

A woman and two men died Thursday night in the electric chair at Sing Sing. All had been duly tried by the courts; had been given every means of defense the law affords. The Governor had delayed the executions. But justice in its most inexorable manner had ruled that they were guilty, and they died.

A man murdered for the money his insurance would bring has been avenged. Three persons, as we say, have expiated their crime. But it is not apparent that society has gained anything from that awful scene in the death-house at Sing Sing.

Warden Lawes, of that institution, not long ago wrote a book called "20,000 Years in Sing Sing." It is an intelligent, interesting, moving story of the thoughts of the man who has responsibility for those whose transgressions against the rules of society have brought them behind the bars.

In it he tells of an execution of a murderer, the father of two children. On that last night the children were sleeping in the warden's house; his guests—unaware of what was to happen to their father. Later, the witnesses of the execution sat with Mr. Lawes, discussing the futility of what they had seen. He took them to the bedroom, pointed to the sleeping children, and said: "They are our orphans. They will pay the penalty for their father's crime."

Elsewhere in that same humane document, Warden Lawes says: "Every murder, whether instigated by passion or criminality * * * reaches back to some form of social disaffection." We don't know what social disaffection caused those three, who died on Thursday, to murder. Neither do we know what was gained by the electrocution. But we do know who will pay the penalty for the woman's crime. It will be her three miserable orphaned children, aged 9, and 7, and 3.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

FRENCH AND German troops faced each other north of Verdun. There were a few minor skirmishes. The beginning of an extensive engagement was expected momentarily.

A SHANGHAI dispatch said 45,000 Japanese soldiers embarked on transports and were awaiting orders. It was reported their destination was Tsingtau, the German possession in China.

ALL TWELVE of the forts surrounding Liege were reported intact and each resisted successfully the attacks of the German infantry and artillery. The defenders were said to have been outnumbered 10 to 1.

Past in Present.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Senate Committee on Banking and Currency blasted away at bankers who sold "worthless foreign bonds," but it ignored what may, perhaps, be the most serious cause of our losses.

We have followed a system of economy which made it impossible for foreign debtors to pay. For more than a decade we have maintained trade barriers which prohibit payment in goods. Behind high tariff walls, year after year, we have financed fresh exports by extending new foreign loans.

Such a policy was never adhered to by a creditor nation before. This country followed it in response to the public will. The bankers can hardly be blamed for the ruin that has followed.

Solvent foreign debtors are blocked from payment. There are not enough dollars abroad to pay what is owed us. In a debtor country it is impossible for a man to go to a bank, present the currency of his land and obtain dollars for delivery here.

There is no boom of foreign bonds now. The sins of the bankers are past.

But our economic sins are with us yet. Still, by restricting imports, we shut off the means of foreign payment. We still send out of our ports more goods than we permit to enter. We still finance fresh sales by sinking new capital abroad.

St. John Lateran.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to call attention to two fundamental errors in the brief editorial, published on August 8, entitled "The 'Lost' Church," which described the recent archeological discovery at the Basilica of St. John Lateran in Rome.

It is a historical error to say that this basilica "was occupied by the first of the Popes, 300 years after Christ was crucified." The date is unquestionably about 311. But the Pope at that time, St. Miltiades, was not one of the first Popes, but the thirty-second pontiff, holding office in direct line of succession from the first Pope, St. Peter.

It is also a historical error to say that Constantine "helped establish the hierarchy of Rome that has lasted to our day." The hierarchy in the Catholic Church is of divine institution. Constantine had nothing to do with it. All power in the church was immediately conferred by Christ upon the Apostles alone to be transmitted to their lawful successors, the bishops, who constitute the ruling body of the church. Primacy of jurisdiction was conferred upon St. Peter and this primacy descends to his successors. JOHN J. O'CONNOR.

We Hope So.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading the very informative and pleasingly-written articles by Robert Shosteck, appearing in your valued paper in connection with trips of the Wanderbird Hiking Club, fostered by you. Would it not be advantageous to your readers to have such popular write-ups of interesting facts appear more frequently?

Paying the Piper.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: People are forever asking questions. Just now, discussing the Government's vast expenditures, they want to know "Where does the money come from?"

About five years ago, after the crash, the question was "Where did the money go to?" meaning, of course, the "money" of the Coolidge prosperity. That wasn't money. Those were stock quotations. And the relief currency that is being circulated now isn't money, either. It is merely a temporary medium of exchange that will be called in by the Government later on. Will the Government collect from those to whom it was handed? Of course not! It will be collected from those who never saw a cent of it. How? Why, by taxation or inflation.

A Poet's Praise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations and more congratulations upon your fine response to the women of the National Capital—in devoting a daily page to their really important daily lives and transactions.

Especially the column "Songs from Contemporary Lutes" appeals to me in a two-fold way; not only because of the aspiring contributors (of whom I am one) to these fine poetry-journals, but because that larger body of the general public to whom such a column of contemporary beauty and worthwhileness makes a definite and daily appeal.

The Vice of Superficiality

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I want to congratulate you on your generosity in giving so much space to Mr. Paul V. Murray's splendid letter in The Post of August 8, in which he takes to task the author of an article on Mexico printed in your paper.

I have not seen the article to which Mr. Murray objects, and I have no desire to enter a discussion in which the views of serious students of Hispanic-American affairs already have so competent a representative as Mr. Murray. What I do wish to comment on is Mr. Murray's insistence that long and serious study, knowledge of Spanish and Hispanic-American racial psychology, sincerity, and lack of bias are prerequisite if any commentary on any phase of Hispanic-American affairs by an Anglo-Saxon, or anyone else for that matter, is to be worthy of respect.

Here in the United States we ridicule—when we do not resent—the half-baked, superficial comments of foreign observers on our own social and political scene; yet North Americans are too often guilty of the same kind of self-assured, ignorant and superficial attempts to evaluate foreign civilizations, cultures and ideals.

Especially is this true with respect to Hispanic-America. In recent years there has been a marked tendency to "take up," like Don Marquis' Hermione and her "little group of serious thinkers," Hispanic-American affairs. This may be a good thing, if from the initial interest a genuine searching for truth develops. The trouble is that too many of our Hermiones, male and female, rush into print, and by the publication of one or two superficial articles quickly qualify as "experts" on things Hispanic-American.

Some of these "experts" who write, lecture or deliver radio talks on Hispanic-America not only have little historical knowledge, but can not speak or even read Spanish or Portuguese. One radio performer, after months of appearances on programs dealing with South America, can not yet pronounce Spanish-American places and personal names correctly. Writers of books and articles on our Southern neighbors serve up a rehash of old stuff that the most superficial knowledge of what present-day Hispanic-Americans, as shown by their books and newspapers, are really thinking, should have prevented. There is usually ample internal evidence that these "observers" are restricted in their sources to materials already printed in English and too often written by persons similarly handicapped.

Along with this superficiality I see a tendency to become "high-falutin'" in discussing Hispanic-America, under the impression that this vice is an infallible mark of the "expert." For instance, President Roosevelt in his Wilson dinner speech of last winter gave a simple, clear pledge of nonintervention by the United States in Hispanic-American countries. This became, to some commentator or other, whose name I have forgotten, "the continentalization of the Monroe Doctrine," although the President, better advised than the "expert" as to the instinctive reaction of most Hispanic-Americans to the very name Monroe Doctrine, did not once mention that subject in his speech. Big words, phrase-making, "talky-talk," an effort to find something big, new, "vital" and significant in every event or pronouncement, however matter-of-fact, characterize the writings and radio talks of these peddlers of commonplaces, and are frequently an obstacle, rather than a help, to the "better understanding between the Americas" of which they prate.

Moreover, I should like to emphasize another point which Mr. Murray brings out by implication. It is this: a writer to whom the Spanish language or the social, cultural, psychological, philosophic, or religious backgrounds of the Hispanic peoples are naturally antipathetic ought to be extremely modest about attempting to qualify as an "expert" in Hispanic-American affairs. He is, and ought to be, inherently suspect until he has proved his competence by solid achievements, generally recognized by experts who lack his bias. Fortunately, as Mr. Murray points out, we have an ample supply of the latter.

On the other side of the picture, it may be worth while to point out that the best existing estimate in Spanish of our North American civilization was not written by one of the Hispanic-American preachers of "Yankeephobia," to whom the very name of our country is anathema and who become apoplectic at the very mention of the "Colossus of the North." Nor is it the work of some holier-than-thou Pharisee, instinctively distrustful of North American religious practices, scandalized at our crime statistics, horrified at the apparent instability of the American home when judged by divorce records, and contemptuous of our political and social organization on the basis of occasional local misgovernment, graft, or malfeasance in public office, lynchings and other forms of lawlessness.

On the contrary, it forms part of an essay by a calm, serene, philosophical South American closet-scholar, Jose Enrique Rodo, intellectually honest, appreciative of our good qualities as a nation and critical of the faults of his own people as well as of ours, who wrote his famous "Ariel" only after saturating himself with North American history, North American literature, and North American thought—which he read voraciously, in English!

One moral that this points, it may be added, is the futility of talking, as we so often do, about developing understanding and acquaintanceship among peoples different in speech, while language barriers remain such an obstacle. In my opinion they are bound to be a serious obstacle in our country as long as the study of foreign languages is systematically discouraged, if not actively opposed, by so many of our "educators."

The Post Impressionist

Little Miss Wang.

Postoffice, Saturday.

NO sooner do we write on a more or less unfamiliar literary subject than it comes before the public in some manner tending to embarrass us. The other day we were learnedly discussing color and posture in the Chinese drama—and here is published the translation of a Chinese play that might have been written by James M. Barrie!

Of course, we could remind you that we were dealing with theatrical accessories; that we weren't speaking of dramatic texts. We could also plead that cultivated Chinese consider this play not quite literature and rather catch-penny. But we scorn evasion.

So—on the slim chance that you don't know it—we'll tell of "Lady Precious Stream," otherwise "The Eight Acts About the Wang Family."

That is the beautiful name of this play, which has been described as "an example of traditional (Chinese) domestic entertainment." It is so old that its author's name appears to be forgotten. However, S. I. Hsiung "does" it into English; Lascelles Abercrombie writes the preface, and Methuen issues it at London. In its entirety its performance might require a week; yet it is rarely produced in its entirety. Certain episodes having a general unity are usually chosen, and those set down by Mr. Hsiung give never a hint of the blue pencil.

Say the stage directions for a stage which has no "scenery," in the Occidental theater's sense of that word: "Let it be clearly understood that this unfurnished stage represents . . . the picturesque garden of the Prime Minister, Wang Yun." And there is Wang himself, wearing a black beard—a symbol which assures the initiated audience he is no villain, but which does not prevent him from being an irritable weakling. His wife, the dialogue soon demonstrates, is nothing for our National Women's Party to cheer about; she has mastered the old virtues of femininity: "To obey—your father when young, your husband when married, your children when a mother." Yet those children of hers talk up to the Prime Minister almost as do the children and sons-in-law of certain Occidental premiers.

Golden Stream is spouse to the mighty Dragon General; Silver Stream has the terrible Tiger General for her mate. The trouble begins when it comes to disposing of Precious Stream.

She won't accept any of the eligible men that her father proposes. She brings to climax a scene of excellent comedy by tossing the embroidered ball, which is the symbol of her choice, to a hovering personage called Hsieh Ping-Kuei, who has good looks, great physical strength and no little dignity—but who happens to be the gardener.

It goes without saying that the Prime Minister promptly orders these romantics to quit his sight. It goes without saying that Precious Stream vows she will never return until her husband-to-be becomes a man whose presence in this garden her father will consider an honor. And it goes without saying that then you sit back, certain Hsieh will either achieve greatness or have it thrust upon him, but interested in the problem of how the Chinese dramatist will bring this about.

Well, he does it by thenceforth making his play less of a fairy tale and more of a comedy. But he marvelously accomplishes the change without a jolt!

Eighteen years have passed. You can tell that by the long beard of once clean-shaven Hsieh. But you can't tell it by any other sign of age in him, and you can hardly tell Hsieh. He is a great man, and looks it.

He led that expedition to larger triumphs than he dreamed. The conceited, but dull-witted, Tiger General tried in vain to kill him. Hsieh has secured the assistance of a powerful Princess. He is the King of the Western Regions.

All set for happiness? You forget your Pinero and the conventions of the old Occidental four-act play. You forget its unexpected hitch at the end of the third act—which this unknown Chinese author has remembered. In a word, both you and Hsieh have forgotten that heroes can't enlist the aid of impressionable Princesses without also enlisting their affections. Hsieh longs for long-absent Precious Stream. Alas, his ardent ally just won't let him go!

And then? Well, Hsieh doesn't strangle her, doesn't even have her strangled. Like any 1934 American youth in similar difficulties, he watches his chance, and runs away. And you may be sure it is for his pet Penelope that this Chinese Ulysses heads . . .

Now we are arrived at what, over here and 20 years ago, would have been Act IV.

Precious Stream is waiting in the cave to which she fled with her lover in their early exile. She hasn't changed, either; doesn't know him, but passes his tests of fidelity magna cum laude. The Tiger General receives his merited reward—after he has interrupted the action by telling Precious Stream to stop flirting with the audience. No garden is too good for Hsieh—and his wrathful ally is appeased by marrying a second best.

Certainly the Chinese classical drama isn't like any other classical drama. But we told you that "Lady Precious Stream" isn't classical. So we commend it to all lovers of Sir James Matthew Barrie.

Barging through Europe with Carlisle Bargeron

The Fleeing Banker.

AT SEA—Dear Aleck: You can't imagine the interesting people who are on this boat, all fleeing like myself from the Revolution in the United States. There are more poignant stories than you can shake a stick at, Aleck, of industrial captains and bankers losing their homes and just getting on the boat with a few personal belongings as the revolutionary mob rushed right up to the gangplank.

BARGERON

A Detroit banker was just telling me of his terrible experience. All of his life he had worked hard and saved, particularly in the Coolidge thrift administration. Always he had been a God-fearing man, who went to church on Sundays and never made an investment unless a fair return seemed assured.

• • • •

Well, suddenly the storm clouds of March, 1933, gathered. Before that he had heard rumblings of discontent, but he maintained his confidence in what he called the level-headedness of the American people until the very last. It was not until Hoover was overthrown that he felt the first pangs of doubt. He shivered appreciably when Mr. Roosevelt shouted from the Capitol portico on March 4 about throwing the money changers out of the temple.

But even then he thought the common sense of the American people would prevail.

You and I can't possibly appreciate, Aleck, the things men like this went through. After all, we didn't own any stock in a bank. We just had money in one.

• • • •

Well, suddenly this man, now in the late evening of life, saw all of his assets, assets acquired over a life time of successful finance, frozen. He couldn't dispose of any of his real estate holdings—except at a terrible sacrifice. His securities were listed on a greatly fallen market. He had to do away with his yacht and cut his servants down from 20 to 10.

But even then, Aleck, he held steadfast to the belief that the country would right itself. The mob, however, kept harassing him. He was called things over the radio and denounced in the press. He grew alarmed about the safety of his person and that of his family. Police protection was placed about his wife, but the mob grew more and more menacing.

Oh, the sleepless nights he went through, Aleck! Oh, the haunted darkness of despair! Would the mob never cease in its demands?

• • • •

Finally, the blow fell, Aleck. But he was prepared for it. Many's the night he had lain awake contemplating it. Yet this did not ease the shock. It came as the guillotine had descended relentlessly on Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, as the soldiers marched onto the train for the last of the Romanoffs. Nowhere could he turn for assistance, for relief or even for comfort.

The mob marched right at him and demanded that he be doubly assessed on his stock-holdings in the bank!

Ain't that awful, Aleck? When a crowd gets out of hand there ain't no stopping it, Aleck.

Well, it was too much for the gentleman, America no longer held the security for him which he had been taught from childhood to expect. If a bank stockholder can't be permitted to let his bank fail without being doubly assessed for his holdings, things have come to a pretty pass. You know what, Aleck? He says he wouldn't be a bit surprised if the next thing they didn't do was to indict him? Innocent-like I asked if they had already done that, but he insists they really hadn't got that far with him yet, though some of the bankers have been indicted.

He is fleeing the upheaval now, though. He hopes to get a job in Russia as a waiter in a restaurant by virtue of the fact that after the Russian revolution we gave a lot of Russian dukes jobs in our restaurants.

As we ended our talk, Aleck, his wife confided in me:

"We can't talk to everybody as we've been talking to you. I've got all my money in a belt around my waist."

"Let's go in swimming," I pleaded.

You know, Aleck, there's not any honor even among emigres.

July Store Sales Gain 16 Per Cent

Reserve Bank Reports on 5th District Trade.

Richmond, Aug. 10 (AP).—Department store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, embracing Virginia, the Carolinas, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, were 16 per cent more in dollars for July than for the same month in 1933, the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank announced tonight.

The survey covered 51 stores. The cumulative gain of these stores was 20 per cent for seven months, compared with a National gain of 16 per cent. Total sales in the 505 stores in the United States last month reflected an increase of 3 per cent over July, 1933.

Utah Apprehensive Of Economic Future

Business Men Generally Sympathetic With New Deal, but Doubt if Stimulation Provided by Government Will Last.

By Raymond Clapper.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Aug. 8 (By mail).—Business men here appear to be generally sympathetic with the effort of the Roosevelt Administration, but doubts are arising as to whether it will succeed.

Here, as on the Pacific Coast, the first impetus of the recovery program appears to have worn off. Business is little, if any, better than a year ago, according to the judgment of leaders. They have no definite sugegstions as to what ought to be done—that is what makes them hesitate to criticize. At the moment business men here, as in other centers in the West, seem to be drifting, baffled by inability to get up momentum, and increasingly apprehensive as to the future.

A fairly typical view is that expressed by E. O. Howard, president of the Walker Bank & Trust Co., one of the leading banking institutions here.

"Business in general is probably a little better than it was a year ago," Mr. Howard said. "No one knows how the present experiments are going to work out. It is a question whether the stimulation provided by Federal expenditures will last. The Government will have to stop spending some time, but I am wondering whether private business is building up strength enough to carry on when that day comes. Of course, there is this to be said about the Government spending program: We are spending our own money. We are taking it out of one pocket and putting it in the other. The money all comes from inside the country and is all being spent inside the country."

Their Caution Makes Doubts Insignificant.

IT is the temperateness of these men and their inclination to be sympathetic with the Administration's efforts that make their doubts the more significant.

Business men here generally favor NRA, so far as fixing minimum wages and maximum hours of employment goes. They are almost unanimous in feeling that a mistake was made in attempting to regulate the barber shops and other service establishments. Smaller business men are hostile. The most vehement man here on the subject of NRA is a small jeweler who says he can not afford to pay the wages and hire the number of people NRA requires. Otherwise, there is little serious complaint.

Likewise with AAA the criticism is of details rather than general policies. Willard T. Cannon, manager of the Utah-Idaho Beet Sugar Co., which is controlled by the Mormon Church, says he is in sympathy with the AAA policy generally but not in all of its details.

"They have put us on a sugar beet quota; but it is practically what we normally raise, so that the curtailment is theoretical rather than actual," he said. "We have no objection to Washington laying down a general policy. But the Government has asked us to get the individual record of every grower of sugar beets, his acreage, the prices he has received, and other data over a five-year period. In our company alone that requires assembling the records of 40,000 growers from whom we have bought beets. We have the data and it is only a clerical job to get it together.

"But the Government will take those figures, and similar ones prepared by other companies and then go out and attempt to make contracts with each of those individual growers. The amount of paper work in that undertaking is simply stupendous. I can't see the Federal Government permanently engaging in making contracts with each individual grower. The job is too big for any one organization to handle. It seems to me that it is due inevitably to break down under its own weight. The job is too tremendous. This is only one illustration; and when you realize that the same thing is going on with the growers of a dozen other basic farm commodities, it seems an impossible task.

Failure Predicted for Price-Fixing Attempts.

"IF the Government would lay down the policy and let us handle the details, and confine itself to seeing that we carried out the policy there would not be the danger of a top-heavy bureaucracy which we face now.

"I have been in Washington and have talked with the AAA sugar men. Only one of them had ever been inside a sugar beet factory. They have no conception of the problems. Yet they are pushing aside business men who have grown up in the industry, who have had to meet the pay rolls month after month and meet the interest on the bonds. Such a method is bound to break down. I am quite aware that the Government has to set up rules. But let us who have spent our lifetime in the business do the detail work."

He, like Mr. Howard, indorsed NRA wage and hour regulation but predicted failure for price-fixing attempts.

President Heber J. Grant, head of the Mormon Church, is more skeptical of the Administration policies than the majority of business men here. He is an old-line protectionist and feels that the beet sugar industry has been treated unfairly by this Administration in admitting a million tons of Philippine sugar a year. He takes the position that the church established the industry in the United States and that from a small beginning it has grown to a tremendous industry which should be protected. Sugar men generally feel that the Administration is not sympathetic, although the active executive of the Utah-Idaho company says Secretary Wallace recognizes a practical situation which has to be met.

"The Administration," Cannon says, "thinks this is a hothouse industry which can exist only with Government protection, and that it has no right to live. Perhaps it is an expensive industry and can live only under protection, but you can apply that to a number of other industries. To kill it would only add to unemployment. It is here and is a leading source of income for a number of States. The Administration definitely does not want to see it expand. It probably will not expand anyway. It is a crop which can be grown advantageously only under irrigation."

Little Comment Made On Securities Act.

BANKERS here have accepted the securities and stock market regulation with little comment. Several leaders take the view that there were conditions which needed correction. They say that Eastern bankers who have been, through here indicated they anticipate no difficulties of a serious nature, although modifications may be needed as various parts of the legislation prove unworkable or objectionable. Bankers here are little affected by the legislation, they say.

RFC practices cause the most criticism in the financial field. One leading banker objected strongly to having been pressured into selling the RFC $250,000 of preferred stock in his bank. He said his institution was 90 per cent liquid and that its capital structure needed no strengthening. Yet he was subjected to strong pressure, he said, to sell preferred stock to the RFC on which the bank had been required to pay 5 per cent interest to the RFC. He regards this as an unnecessary exaction of tribute by Washington. The RFC, according to bankers here, recently cut the interest rate to 5 per cent.

Still they are critical because they say that the RFC gets its money from the Treasury at about 2 per cent and then requires the banks to pay it 4 per cent. When Harvey Couch, one of the RFC directors, was here a few days ago, he was urged by leading bankers to cut the rate on preferred bank stock to 3 per cent and promised to take the question before the RFC board on his return to Washington.

The Administration's silver price-fixing program has failed to bring any stimulus to the silver-mining industry in this region. Only one small mine has opened since the first of the year. Other mines are running on an even more curtailed schedule than previously. The new Sunshine Mine in northern Idaho, which yields a high silver content ore, is the only one which has sharply increased operations.

The reason for the lag arises out of the technical fact that silver is, in the case of most mines, a by-product. Or rather a ton of ore when broken down will produce some silver, some copper, some lead, a little zinc and possibly a bit of gold. As production of silver increases, the production of the other metals increases with it. Utah silver mines yield a high proportion of lead and copper. Lead has become a drug on the market.

Silver Price Increase Offset by Drop in Lead.

"THE fact is," said A. G. MacKenzie, research expert for the silver-mining industry, "that the effect of the silver price-fixing policy on the industry is nothing in comparison with the increase in price. A year ago silver was selling at about 35 cents. The Government fixed the price at 64½ cents. But the increase in the price of silver has been more than offset by the decline in the price of lead."

Whether or not the original motive was to stimulate foreign trade or was the hope—later proven delusive—of actually helping the mining industry, the result has been practically nothing at all in Utah, which, until Idaho's Sunshine Mine last year began dishing up silver in unheard-of quantities, was the country's No. 1 silver producer.

Here again, as in other businesses, nobody knows which way to turn. Mining men have suggested that the Government take advantage of abnormally low prices on copper and lead and buy up huge stores and lay them aside in the event of future war needs. That is a suggestion, but even the mining men do not seem to have very great confidence in it. Beyond that they have little to offer.

It is this bewilderment, the feeling of not knowing which way to turn, that is the dominant note in the Western country. It has not reached the stage of despair, for every one still is hopeful that something will develop. But they don't know how and they are disturbed.

Story of Small Frog in Water Spigot Disputed

Danville, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—E. C. Prillaman, employe of the Danville Traction & Power Co., and E. C. Brantley, waterworks engineer, are fencing over a frog.

Mr. Prillaman insists that when he turned on the spigot at the car barns, a small frog came out and hopped around the basin.

Mr. Brantley says the frog would have had to dive 20 feet to the water intake. He adds that the water in the reservoir is so heavily chlorinated that it will not support animal life.

August Relief Fund Up $9,000 in Allegany

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.). Families and individuals on relief rolls in Allegany County will receive slightly more this month than in July, according to Harvey H. Weiss, deputy administrator of the Allegany County Welfare Board.

The State's allotment has been increased for August and Allegany County will have about $40,000 to expend, or $9,000 in excess of July.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

America's Letters.

AGAIN and again I turn back to Ludwig Lewisohn's ringing pages on our literature, "Expression in America." First published in 1932 (Harper, $4), it is now in the seventh edition. I could wish it 77. For here, in a roomy study (590 pp.) of our truest and most expressive authors from colonial times to the present, is the work, as the late John Macy put it too well to paraphrase, "of a distinguished mind and a passionately honest heart enamored of beautiful things." It is a book to read and reread, always stimulating, always building up a notion of our literature larger than, say, the reputation of Poe or the achievement of Whitman. Yet, shrewd as are some of the judgments and profound as most of them are, the excellence of the book rises high above tagging Howells, Dickinson or Lewis with this and that. It remains a book of vital principles—principles with which to examine literature and, it seems to me, with which to live.

THEO. HALL.

Let me specify. Mr. Lewisohn is not afraid of the term "didactic." The poet (he uses this in its broad sense of maker) must teach by his very exploration of life, if he is to rise above the level of the primitive bard and the elegant artificer. The bard resembles the tribal medicine man or soothsayer, "inspired by what he believes to be the god, and what is in reality a surge of group emotion." Most poets in wartime sink back to this level; in this very day we have our bards in Edgar Guest and Harold Bell Wright. Nor is the artificer, writing on themes outside himself merely to please and edify, and exemplified by Longfellow or O. Henry, or most magazine writers, less removed from the true poet and maker of the prime stuff of literature whether in novels, essays or verse.

Remember that Mr. Lewisohn is discussing and defining the highest and most enduring works—much else, nine-tenths and more of the books appearing day by day, do not pretend to approach this level and yet have their place in the nature of things. When he removes Mrs. Edith Wharton from the highest pale—"one can not be an artist and a lady"—it is solely to indicate what the highest pale may be. We need that distinction, just as, in another field, we need to know just how long is a yard.

• • • •

The second important point of "Expression in America" is the author's dependence, sometimes rather annoying, on Freudian psychology. Sex complexes are as useful to Mr. Lewisohn as the metric system. But though we know now we can not find in Freud the whole truth of human nature, though this critical bias seems already a bit outmoded, we must remember how valuable this method is as an antidote to the opposite extreme. And it is mere repetition, not morbid concern with the topic, which at times displeases the reader of the book.

To characterize Mr. Lewisohn's attitude I'm reduced to such banal terms as wholesome and natural; better put, he constantly affirms the entire life of the body, mind and spirit. In an age, though changing for the better, of dissection and despair, he puts together the whole man.

• • • •

Notice his remarks on an archtype of the twenties, T. S. Eliot, who once wrote: "Poets, in our civilization, as its exists at present, must be difficult." Adds Mr. Lewisohn: "It all amounts to an involuntary definition of a despair of meaning, to a confession of aridity of heart, of which the proof came in good time through Eliot's flight, paralleled in many periods by those who had pitched their expectations of life too high and could not bear their adolescent disappointment, into the bosom of a fictive father-image and force, in this case Royalism and Anglo-Catholicism."

Not that Eliot is no poet, "evidently profoundly and tragically sincere." But hear Mr. Lewisohn: "To the youths who cling to him one might say: this is no last word, but one of the oldest. Men not ignoble have gone down before life in other ages and wandered in waste lands and taken refuge in some monastery or hermitage either of the soul or of the body or of both. But the creative imagination is at one with life and its procreative processes and withers both in the desert of despair and in the refuge of blank authority."

You may call Mr. Lewisohn a bit over-sonorous, perhaps even platitudinous, but you can not deny that the core of the truth he expresses in this great book will outlast all creeds of empty esthetics and immature minstrelsy.

• • • •

"Expression in America" is history and criticism. To present generous samples of work which he found marked by "veracity of substance and probity of texture," Mr. Lewisohn collected the next year a massive anthology, "Creative America" (Harper, $4).

I know of no better one-volume array of our writers of prose and verse. Its 725 pages, elegantly printed, run from William Bradford's "History of Plymouth Plantation" to the late Hart Crane's obscure but vibrant poetry. Mr. Lewisohn has ignored mere clumsy chronology; he groups the authors under such fundamental notions as "The Polite Writers," "Demos Speaks," and "The Great Critical Debate." A feature is his large inclusions from novels, not often in anthologies. Another is his attention to contemporary writers. Observe, too, his masterly editing of Emerson—no adept at continuous construction, Emerson wrote in aphorisms, and the best of these are grouped under their topics.

I've scarcely, I know, conveyed to you my total enthusiasm for these two books by Mr. Lewisohn. But they belong, by right of eminent domain, side by side on the shelf of every reader who cherishes the history and hopes of American letters.

Giving Arthursville The Public Works

THE CONSTRUCTION . . . by the Government . . . of Arthursville, West Virginia, was intended to be the orderly, economic creation of a model town. Thus far it has turned out to be a confused and costly fiasco. It was to have shown the people the virtues of planned economy over the slipshod methods of an existing capitalism. But the finished product promises to be only a dubious victory over a long series of blunders . . . blunders that would be ridiculous if they were not so expensive. The story of Arthursville will astound you.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Battle Over "Shorts."

Mother, may I go out to golf?
Yes, my little sweetie;
Hang your clothes in the locker room
And play a la Tahiti!

• • • •

Whether or not woman golfers should wear much of anything on the golf course is a question now agitating America. The first definite move against "shorts" has been made by the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association which has barred them in New York tournaments.

• • • •

The New York association holds that a golf course is a golf course and not a Turkish bath. It contends that the patron saint of golf is Sandy MacGregor and not Earl Carroll.

• • • •

But in many parts of the country "shorts" are being adopted as the proper thing for the well-undressed lady golfer to wear, and on many fairways it is difficult to tell whether a girl is about to try a mashie-niblick shot or an underwater swim.

• • • •

While legs are no longer a novelty in America, the burlesque girl influence didn't do the men golfers any good and some of our best known duffers have insisted that either "shorts" be barred or the admonition, "Keep your eye on the ball," scrapped as silly.

• • • •

Women defenders of golf under the slogan, "We're not dressing," say that "shorts" are comfortable, cool and proper in an age that is no longer leg-conscious.

• • • •

Their cry is "Keep your shorts on!"

• • • •

Their opponents say there is no more reason for a woman to appear on a golf course in scanties than to go to a bridge party in a nightgown.

• • • •

Unless milady's tendency to shuck off her clothes when engaged in outdoor sports is checked she may presently be practicing her niblick shots in a Turkish towel.

• • • •

• • • •

The outcome of the battle is still in doubt. The East seems to feel that Lady Godiva should be kept off the fairways with or without her horse. But the West thinks a Tiller girl in every trap is okay.

• • • •

In the meantime the husbands of America secretly hope the "anti-shorts" win. They know very well that—

Mrs. Spratt is very fat
And Mrs. Jones is lean,
But both look awful in those "shorts"
When on a putting green.

Indian Names.

Blackfeet Indians have christened the President "Lone Chief," and Secretary Ickes "Big Bear." Suggestions for other cabinet christenings:

Gen. Johnson—Chief Many-Words.

Mr. Tugwell—Young-Warrior-Full-of-Funny-Notions.

Jim Farley—Great White Brother of the Many Job Hunters.

Secretary Perkins—Mother-Huddle.

Maybe, if a certain New Jersey golf club allows women golfers in "shorts," it will be rechristened Shorts Hills.

Decree Granted.

By Robert Quillen.

My dear Louise: Before your time it was a common thing for itinerant evangelists to tell deathbed stories and horrifying tales of wicked men who repented too late.

The idea was to scare sinners, and the practice died a natural death when sinners refused to be scared.

But it was a good idea while it lasted. It worked, and that is all you can say for any idea.

I mention the matter here because I wish to try a similar idea on you—or ask you to try it on yourself.

Consider your present situation—the home you have, and those who love you, and all of your possessions and advantages.

You take these things for granted, as other people do, and therefore fail to appreciate their value.

But suppose you should lose them—any or all of them. Use your imagination a little and try to visualize the fix you would be in if some tradgey should spoil your present set-up.

The cynic would call that an appeal to sentimentality, much like the old-fashioned evangelist's, but it is much more than that.

Here is the value that justifies it.

One who perceives and understands the truth is more intelligent than one who does not. You are at your best when you see things as they really are, and below par when your understanding of things is inaccurate and clouded.

Therefore anything that clears your understanding and enables you to measure values correctly is a thing of great value.

Well, that is what you achieve by using your imagination to picture the hardships you would have to endure if misfortune robbed you of the blessings you now enjoy.

It is an exercise good for the soul. It opens your eyes. It makes you realize how lucky you are. And it keeps you from making yourself ridiculous by grouching about little things that don't matter.

If those who are sitting on top of the world can't appreciate their good fortune, it is merely another case of pearls cast before swine.

The swine would be happy, even as you and I, if they had wit enough to understand the value of pearls.

Love. DAD.

3 Bridges Opened On Virginia Road

Richmond, Aug. 10 (Spl.).—Opening to traffic of three bridges on Route 1, Virginia's main highway, was announced by the State department today.

One bridge crosses the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Co.'s tracks north of Ashland. It takes the place of the underpass at Ellets Crossing. Relocation of the highway has eliminated nearly one-half a mile distance.

Another bridge completed and now ready for travel spans Giles Run, just north of Fredericksburg.

Four Cases of 'Typhoid' Diagnosed as Malaria

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Moore and two children, of Walkers Ford, Appomattox County, who were brought here under belief they had typhoid fever, have malaria, not typhoid, doctors here declared.

The local bureau of health has suggested to the State public welfare department that inspectors be sent there to eliminate the mosquitoes.

Flooded Chickahominy Halts Motor Traffic

Police Called to Disperse Crowd of Jobless.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—Two hundred jobless, mostly colored, appeared at the office of the health and public welfare department this morning demanding work and food. Only about 35 gained entrance. A huge crowd remained on the outside.

A riot squad of police dispersed the crowd without trouble.

The crowd, the police said, was headed or encouraged by a man who has been the guiding spirit in communistic activities here for some time. After a similar demonstration last fall several men were arrested and fined.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum.

This astounding booklet was perpetrated by Wallace Irwin at San Francisco in 1902, and fortunate are those who own a copy.

Its author, Wallace Irwin, and his equally well known brother, Will Irwin, were born in Oneida, N. Y., and are both graduates of Stanford University, in California; this pair, with Gelett Burgess, also born in the East, made California a well-spring of humor in the early years of this century. At that time all three were newspaper men in San Francisco.

In the spacious times of Queen Elizabeth the 14-line sonnet was an extremely popular form of poetry; and it was not unusual for the poets to write a sonnet-sequence, where the whole story of a prolonged love affair or an intimate history of some kind was given in a succession of sonnets. The most famous sonnet-sequence ever written was by Shakespeare, but Philip Sidney's "Astrophel and Stella" and other autobiographies in sonnets were very popular.

Now Wallace Irwin, in his "Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum," produced something more than a burlesque of the Sonnet-sequence. It is, of course, a buffo version of frustrated love. But it has a well-defined and exciting plot, and the sad adventures of the hero are followed with hilarity mingled with pity. There are, of course, three characters—the girl Mamie, the drug-store clerk, and the hero. Apart from the humor and excitement of the narrative, the language is what makes the poem most notable. It is a storehouse of the slang of 30 years ago, and therefore a distinct addition to American dialect. The slang is terrific.

When he gave his fiancee an engagement ring, we are told that "he slipped a 14k on Mamie's grab."

I have no copy of the book within a thousand miles of this desk, but I can remember some of the language. The hero made a fatal error when, with Mamie looking on, he fought the durg clerk, and quickly attained a tremendous victory. Did the spoils belong to the victor? Quite otherwise. The girl, instead of admiring our hero's prowess, was roused to a passion of sympathy and tenderness by the defeat of her lover. The victorious fighter looked on and saw Mamie busied with repairing her lover's damaged features. She

And coughed up loops of kindergarten chin."

This is a gorgeous book to read aloud to those who are worthy to hear it. I dare say a large bookshop would know where to find you a copy. Try.

Ban on Carnivals In Stafford Asked

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.). A ban on all carnivals in Stafford County except fairs conducted for charity or public benefit has been recommended in a resolution to be considered September 3 by the county board of supervisors.

The resolution calls for a $50 fine or a 30-day jail sentence for any person attempting to conduct a carnival within the county limits. Action followed formal objections to the Fredericksburg City Council against the gambling and medicine shows which have occasionally located just outside the city limits.

Fredericksburg has practically eliminated the shows from the corporate area by means of a prohibitory tax.

New Bridge Opened Over Rapidan River

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—The new Germanna Ford Bridge over the Rapidan River, connecting Culpeper and Orange Counties, on the Culpeper-Fredericksburg highway was opened to traffic today.

The concrete and steel structure has a 24-foot roadway, is 454 feet long and has a channel span of 45 feet above the water. The east approach eliminates the dangerous curve on the old highway, and the opposite approach has been straightened and widened.

This was a Federal project, using labor from the rolls of the reemployment office of Culpeper and Orange, and has been in progress since April 11. The cost was approximately $45,000.

U. S. Marine Officers Get Posts Here

Final Ceremonies Set for August 15 at Port au Prince.

The Stars and Stripes, which for the past 19 years have waved protectingly over Haiti, have been lowered and the red and blue flag of Haiti is now proudly floating over the small dominion. The simple though dignified ceremony which accompanied the change in flags also marked the withdrawal of the United States Marines from their former home at Cape Haitien on the north coast of Haiti.

Although the lowering of the United States flag sounded taps for the "Garde d'Haiti," and the Marines now no longer patrol the wee country as big brothers, they will remain on the island until the middle of the month at Port au Prince. On the morning of August 15 the final ceremonies of withdrawal, in which both Haitian and American officials will play important parts, will take place. In the afternoon the sea-going soldiers will sail for home.

Many of the officers who are returning to this country will be on duty in Washington or at the various posts nearby. Lieut. Col. Clayton B. Vogel has been assigned to the Marine Headquarters in Washington for one month's duty after which he will go to Chicago for station. Capt. William C. Hall, also ordered to the headquarters, will be here indefinitely. Maj. Thomas S. Clarke, Capt. John T. Walker, Capt. William J. Whaling and Capt. Franklin Hart will all be on duty at Quantico, the Marine post in Virginia.

Mrs. Norman Armour, wife of the United States Minister to Haiti, has arrived in New York for a brief visit and is stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The Minister has remained at his post in Port au Prince.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Starts a Wood Yard

If there were a good live bear like Blackie in every neighborhood there would be lots more work done, and if everybody worked more they would have more, and they would have less time to loaf around and spend their money and get into trouble, so three cheers for Blackie Bear. You already know how he bought new clothes and lots of other things for Mr. Man and his wife, and now look what he is doing for Uncle Joe!

It has always been the hardest sort of a job to get Uncle Joe to cut and haul up enough wood to keep him and Aunt Judy warm all winter. He would just take his donkey and wagon off and chop down little trees and pick up dead limbs and things that were lying around on the ground.

But it's going to be a lot different this winter. That tree that Uncle Joe cut down to get his coon skin was one of the biggest old swamp pines you ever saw, and the top of it had died and become nice fat lightwood that lots of folks know as "kindling wood." The green sap has all died down so that it catches fire and burns almost like coal oil that Uncle Joe and lots of other people use in their lamps. The bottom of the tree was green, but after it has been stacked up and dried for a while it would make a great fire for winter nights.

So Aunt Judy had put Uncle Joe to work on that tree.

"Somebody got the coon out of that tree and left his skin, and then they got the honey and left you a lot of dead bees. Now you had better hurry and finish cutting and hauling the tree before they get that," said Aunt Judy. Yes, Blackie was just filling up Uncle Joe's yard and Aunt Judy's wood box with wood, and was going to keep them warm all the winter, so they could sit up as late as they wanted to and toast their feet by a good fire, instead of having to go to sleep early, as they had done many a time before, just to get warm. Isn't Blackie a good bear, and hasn't he really more sense than some people?

After he got started at a thing, Uncle Joe didn't really hate so awfully bad to work, but with him, as it is with so many other people, the trouble was to get him started. Now that he was at work on that big tree, and got to thinking about the nice wood he was going to have for the cold nights, he had a good time at his work.

The truth is that he had kept so busy and stayed around home so closely that Mr. Man had wondered if he were not sick, and he had come over to see what was the matter. When he found Uncle Joe hard at work cutting and hauling in such a lot of wood, and splitting up that beautiful lot of kindling, it looked so good to him that he fell to helping Uncle Joe finish the job, and he really enjoyed hearing him tell about how he happened to cut down the big tree.

And it reminded him that he had better haul some more wood to his own house, for he had been so busy gathering his crops that he hadn't cut as much wood as he would need.

So it seems that Blackie brought Mr. Man over to help Uncle Joe cut wood, and that he put Mr. Man to work at getting in some more wood for himself.

Culbertson on Bridge

A Squeeze Situation.

It is a pity that the most beautiful play often follows some pretty bad bidding. Although of course there are many instances where the fulfillment of a normal contract is made difficult, and consequently necessitates brilliant play, because of a bad break in one or more suits, there are also a great many cases where the difficulty, and hence the brilliancy, are the result of reaching the wrong contract.

Today's hand was terrifically overbid by North and South. The bidding was so bad that I will not give it, even as a lesson on how not to bid.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 10 ♡ K J 7 4 2 ◇ K Q 7 ♣ A Q 8 2
♠ Q 9 8 ♡ Q 8 6 5 3 ◇ J 10 ♣ 10 7 6	N W E S	♠ J 7 6 5 3 ♡ 10 ◇ 9 8 6 4 ♣ 5 4 3
	♠ A K 4 2 ♡ A 9 ◇ A 5 3 2 ♣ K J 9

Suffice it to say that South was the Declarer at a final contract of seven notrump. West's Opening lead was the diamond Jack, and the Declarer immediately saw that he had only eleven absolutely certain tricks. A heart finesse would have to be taken and, if successful, would assure the twelfth trick. A break in either the heart suit or the diamond suit would of course provide the thirteenth trick, but South immediately saw that there must be an automatic squeeze if neither of these suits broke.

Since the success of the heart finesse was absolutely essential to the fulfillment of the contract, South planned his play on the hopeful assumption that the heart Queen was correctly located. After winning the Opening lead with the diamond Queen in Dummy he immediately cashed two more diamond tricks and four club tricks, discarding a spade in his own hand on Dummy's fourth club. On the fourth club West discarded one of his hearts and on the third diamond he was forced to discard a spade, leaving the burden of protecting the spade situation to his partner.

The Ace of hearts was now led, and then another heart, and the Jack finessed in Dummy. When this held the trick the heart King was laid down. Whereas West had been squeezed in the earlier play on the club and diamond leads, East was now squeezed. He was unable to keep both the top diamond to beat the five-spot, which still remained in Declarer's hand, and three spades to prevent the third spade, also in the Declarer's hand, from winning a trick. Actually, East discarded a spade, and the Declarer naturally discarded the opposite suit from his own hand—a diamond.

The above is how the play actually worked out. However, on the line of play adopted by South the contract would have been made even if West had held the four diamonds instead of East. Since the West player had to be played for the heart Queen in any event, South, after noticing that East showed out on the third round of diamonds instead of West, would have then played out his Ace and King of spades before playing the heart suit. This, of course, would have squeezed West, who would have been unable to keep both the thirteenth diamond and a triple guard for the heart Queen. In other words, as long as the hearts are in the West hand there is no division of the other cards on which the contract of seven notrump can not be fulfilled.

Help Is Given In Furnishing Of One's Home

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HALF the bother and brain wrinkling attendant or furnishing one's home has been removed, thanks to the efforts of a downtown store. In their furniture department they have set up 12 rooms and a foyer completely furnished from drapes to knick-knacks.

As one rambles from one room to another interesting innovations meet the eyes. For instance, one room given over to several Duncan Phyfe models combines the old and the new in Federal American drapes. Heavy folds of red and blue fabric are caught up to one side with coarse rope-like cord.

In another room, and this a bedroom, modern and colonial furnishings are combined. A wide modernistic bed is spread with a tufted colonial coverlet. Back of the bed four lovely flower prints adorn the wall. Here also is a modernistic dressing table, solid white except for touches of blue glass.

It is the modernistic rooms that are causing most comment. One of these has strange angular chairs covered in a checked wooly homespun and trimmed in leather. In another is a sofa that can be taken apart and used as three chairs, or a small sofa and one chair. It can also be arranged V-shape to fit into the corner of the room.

* * * *

Comfort Stressed.

This same furniture department which is offering such scenic wealth in completely furnished rooms has also a bargain chair. It's a large thing, and soft as a feather mattress. Along with this comes an ottoman with a semidetached pillow. One look at the chair and ottoman is enough to make a weary man want to sprawl and "call for his pipe, and call for his bowl, and call for his fiddlers three!" For the time being the chair ottoman are selling for less than you'd dream!

They're available in rust or green, plain or figured.

* * * *

Try a "Brownie."

Here's a delectable morsel that is a riddle! The stores are closed today, but remember Monday to stop by a certain department and ask for some "Brownies."

Now sample one! Is it cake? Or candy? It tastes like both, but exactly like neither.

The facts of the case are these: A brownie is really an exceptionally large, rich piece of chocolate fudge that has been baked! And is it good! Just try one!

Luxury in the Bath.

Not only three large cakes of soap in this special package but a special gift of lavender meal!

What a luxury such a package adds to the bath. First of all a bit of the meal into the water. As soon as it dissolves it gives the water a refreshing lavender fragrance—and makes the water soft! Now for a lot of lather from a cake of the lavender soap.

If you aren't looking out for such a bargain for your own use, keep this in mind as a lovely gift.

* * * *

Perfume Trunk.

Here is a little trunk all packed for you. It contains three perfumes for three different occasions. There is the "L'Heure du Cocktail," "La Grande Soiree," and "Boite de Nuit."

Each perfume is in a small odd-shaped bottle, but each bottle has a secure top that keeps the fragrant contents from spilling all over the place.

It is only necessary to use the merest drop, for the perfumer said he much preferred a perfume which spread it's fragrance from one drop than one which required a liberal sprinkling before it was apparent.

* * * *

Tulip Time in Compacts.

It must be tulip time in the way of compacts judging by those in delicate tulip shapes in a downtown store.

Some time ago a few of these arrived in only two colors, and they sold immediately. So for a reorder. This time they have come in green, red, black and blue.

* * * *

Copper Highball Set.

Six solid copper highball glasses, and a copper tray will give an interesting touch to a man's den.

Each glass is amply large to hold a highball, and a pretty picture it makes filled to the brim with a sparkling beverage and ice cubes—maybe a sprig of mint or two.

This is also an attractive water set for an office as it is plain, sturdy and durable looking.

* * * *

Paper-Mache Coasters.

A complete set of paper-mache coasters costs only 35 cents. There are two large mats and eight small ones, designed with colored prints of flower girls and couples in evening clothes.

All Kinds of Toasts Go Good With Milk

Taste Best When Bread Is Thoroughly Dried Out, So As to Have Nutty Flavor; Use of Peaches Described.

By Ann Barrett.

THE BOWL or the glass that cheers is likely to be brimming with milk these days, because it's quick, tastes good and contains what lagging summer energy needs.

Bread with milk is the only dish Explorer William Beebe cares a whoop about. And crackers with milk is Graham McNamee's signing-off dish, night after night.

Bread, crackers (be sure you crisp them first) and cereals are all perfect pals for a bowl of milk.

But don't think you always have to have them in the same form. Sometimes it's even nice change to have the milk heated. And the bread can get to be toast in practically no time at all. Cinnamon toast. Orange toast. Milk toast. French toast with sweetened, sliced peaches. That last is good!

Cinnamon Crackers.

Cinnamon toast you know about. But have you ever tried cinnamon crackers made the same way? Not only good with a glass of milk, but delicious for dessert as a sweet wafer with fresh fruit.

Delicious orange toast goes like this: First mix 2 tablespoons grated orange rind and 2 tablespoons orange juice into ⅛ cup sugar. Then toast thin slices of bread on one side only. Spread the other side with softened butter, sprinkle the sugar on and run these slices under the broiler till sugar melts into butter.

Hot milk toast tastes best, I think, when the bread is thoroughly dried out so as to have a nutty flavor. (Especially whole wheat bread.) To this end I toast the slices slowly, then butter them, cut them into 1-inch squares and let these dry out still more in the oven. Serve these in a large, family-sized bowl, with oceans of rich, hot milk, seasoned with butter and salt.

Peachy French Toast.

You know how ordinary French toast goes. Say, 3 eggs, beaten up a little with 2 cups milk and ½ teaspoon salt. Strain this and add 1 tablespoon sugar. Then dip half slices of bread in this mixture and brown them delicately in butter. (Mixture will be enough for about 12 small slices.) Serve these piping hot, with sweetened sliced peaches over them, and a glass of milk close by.

Peach Cobbler.

Speaking of peaches, it occurs to me that a piece of good peach cobbler makes slick eating with a glass of milk, too. If you like plenty of peaches in proportion to your crust, you'll use at least 1 quart of them—sliced and sweetened to your taste (also spiced very lightly with nutmeg and cinnamon, if you like).

The crust will be just a rich biscuity affair, made like this: Sift 2 cups of sifted general-use flour into a bowl with 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon granulated sugar. Then work in ½ cup shortening (part butter gives a nicer flavor). Add just enough milk to hold mixture together. About 2-3 cup if you expect to roll the crust out. A little more if you like a softer crust that you can spread over the peaches with a spoon.

Then butter a baking dish (shallow or deep, as you like). Mix the sliced, sweetened peaches with a little melted butter—say 2 tablespoons to 1 quart. Put them into the dish, put the crust over and bake in a hot oven (about 425 F.) about 30 minutes. Cut out in squares while still warm and serve upside down.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Squint or Crossed Eyes.

The term squint, or strabismus, includes not only crossed eyes but any variation from the normal position of the eye in which both eyes are unable to focus on the same point. The term astigmatism, which some people associate with crossed eyes, refers to an entirely different condition.

In squint one eye turns farther in or out than its fellow eye. Often the eye which turns has defective vision, but this is not always true. It is thought that in some instances an eye with normal vision loses this after it has become crossed because vision is not employed. This perhaps explains the peculiar fact that persons with crossed eyes seldom see double. They learn to disregard completely the image seen by the crossed eye and react to tests like persons with only one eye. This is true even when vision of the crossed eye remains good. The crossed eye may have perfect vision when the fixed or uncrossed eye is covered, but as soon as it is uncovered the patient fails to use the crossed eye.

There is a widespread opinion that a child can not be treated or even examined satisfactorily until he is old enough to read letters. This is not true, as children may be examined by means of instruments such as the retinoscope and opthalmoscope and their refractive errors corrected by glasess at the age of 18 months or less. In this examination drops which dilate the pupils are used.

It is most important that children be examined as early as squint is detected, since in many instances the use of glasses, when prescribed early enough, will correct the squint and obviate the necessity of an operation. This gives the squinting eye the best chance to develop useful vision, and often in later life the glasses may be dispensed with.

A fair number of cases are not improved by such means and require operation. By one or more operations it is possible to correct nearly every case of ordinary squint, the exceptions being those due to paralysis of a muscle. If vision has become seriously impaired, it may not be restored by operation, but the eyes will remain normal. Such an operation may be performed whenever it becomes evident that glasses and exercises are not bringing about improvement.

What Today Means

"Leo."

If August 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

This August 11, in so far as business is concernend, will prove rather humdrum, but there may be plenty of diversified forms of entainment for those seeking excitement or distraction, providing you have the wherewithal for expenses. A very affluent individual, without financial responsibilities or worries thoughtlessly may try to persuade you to indulge in a reckless form of expenditure. If you use good judgment you will remember you are the one paying the piper, and that your friend will not come to your rescue when some financial obligations have to be met. You may meet some one socially who will try to impress you with his importance and social position by vainglorioously harping on his lineage. As a rule only parvenues resort to this form of entertainment, those to the manner born do not have to. Romeos and Juliets will not find balconies or step ladders necessary to elevate them above the sordid affairs of Mother Earth. August 11 may prove an ideal day for love's fancies to sprout wings strong enough to carry them away up in the clouds, where they will spend a pleasant time building castles in the air.

If a woman and August 11 is your birthday, and if you do not differ greatly from most of those born on this date, you possess a poetic nature. Your appreciation of all things that are beautiful qualify you to fill a position where discrimination in taste and an artistic touch as well as eye are essential qualifications. A business dealing in some form of art work or interior decorating should offer you unlimited opportunities. Window dressing, or the buying of novelties for the gift department of some store should prove both interesting as well as profitable for one with your talent. A domestic life should also prove most satisfying.

Children born on August 11, when they reach their teens, should be encouraged to take a great interest in literature, and everything possible should be done to direct them along the right line in the selection of their books.

If a man and August 11 is your natal day, if you cultivate studious habits and concentrate on some special line of work, your results should prove most gratifying. A wife should prove helpful to you in advancing both your business as well as social position.

Avocado Pear Sandwich Gets Contest Prize

Onion, Cheese and French Dressing Also Used in Recipe.

By Susan Mills.

BEFORE getting into the business of recipes, there's something new afoot. Because so many housewives have voluntarily submitted household hints along with the recipes, a special little column for these suggestions will be organized.

All of you, whose recipes have made this column valuable to readers, will have up your sleeves many useful and labor-saving hints. We ask you to send them in, to Susan Mills, The Washington Post, so they may be of service to other home makers. No cash prizes are offered; the column will be the result of the cooperative spirit that has been shown through the recipe contests. It will appear twice a week; Tuesdays and Sundays on the Household page.

The recipe contest this week is a delight in itself. Delicious sandwich suggestions were prolific and unusual. The prize winners are: Mrs. H. L. Breuninger, 7019 Georgia avenue, $3; Miss Pearl Kimble, Grafton Hotel, $2; and Miss Grace Hale, 1940 Calvert street, $1. Honorable mention is awarded Mrs. Annie E. Adams, Mrs. Myrtle B. Drew, and Miss Agnes McNeilly.

A Sandwich Suggestion.

A former minister from San Salvador told me the only way to eat an avocado pear was mashed and properly blended. He liked it as a salad, but we like it as a sandwich, this way:

Peel and mash one avocado. Add ½ onion, minced, ½ cup grated Gorganzola (or Parmesan) cheese. Moisten with highly-seasoned French dressing. Salt and pepper and paprika to taste.

Spread mixture on crustless slice of whole wheat bread. Place lettuce leaves on another slice. Serve as an open or shut sandwich.

Rum-Ditty.

Work as much soft brown sugar as needed into a bowl of butter (amount depends on number of sandwiches needed) until butter has absorbed all possible. Then flavor with old Jamacia rum and nutmeg. Spread on thin slices of whole wheat bread, thinly buttered.

Serve with your nicest iced coffee and choicest summer bachelors.

Sandwiches Supreme.

½ pound Roquefort cheese
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 tablespoon chopped almonds
Worcestershire sauce

Thoroughly blend cheese, mayonnaise and almonds. Add a few drops of Worcestershire sauce to season. If a thinner mixture is desired or the flavor toned down a bit, use cream.

Melons Offer Timely Contest Idea for Week

MELONS are their juiciest now, and the market is full of all the delicious kinds. For next week, let's have your melon ideas, whether for fruit cups, salads, desserts, preserves and what not.

Send recipes to Susan Mills, The Washington Post, to be received not later than Thursday of next week. Type them if possible and be sure your name and full address is printed on each sheet sent in. Prizes will be the same.

P. S. Please don't forget about the household hints.

Filing System for Paper Dolls Solves Problem of Untidiness.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

IF PAPER dolls are the bane of your existence because your small daughter clutters every available box and bureau drawer with them, a suitable filing system will solve the problem.

All you need is an old magazine or catalogue. Write each doll's name on her back and paste in the front page of the book a sheet of white paper to serve as an index.

The business of filing is fun, and good training besides. It is always easy to find a particular doll and solve the problem of untidiness very satisfactorily.

Two little girls of my acquaintance invented the system for themselves and kept it up all through their paper doll years.

Tuesday—a Vacation Hint.

Has your child developed some way of entertaining herself or taking care of her own possessions? You can pass on the suggestion to other mothers by writing Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post. Name of correspondent will be omitted on request.

POTOMAC PARK

By CAROLYN COX

The characters in the story are: Wanda Mallory, who came to Washington penniless and found a job in the Government. David Randall, who shows romantic inclinations toward Wanda, but about whom there is an air of mystery. Kentucky Queen, who works in Wanda's office and who offers to share her apartment with her. And Jennie Stokes, in the same office, who is being retired on a pension. Tomorrow's installment of "Potomac Park," in the magazine section of The Post, will be illustrated by photographs posed by Government employes.

IT was poor Jennie Stokes' last day in the Government service. She arrived, flustered, smiling bravely.

"She does it so well," said Wanda to Miss Wilson, "that if I didn't know better, I'd think she was happy."

She greeted each one, carefully, gently, and sat down by her desk at the window. Her eyes traveled over Potomac Park, rested wistfully upon Lincoln Memorial, traveled over the mottled trunks of the sycamore trees, over the bare limbs, from treetop to treetop as if she were counting the seedballs which dangled there, thick as ornaments on a Christmas tree. Her lips were parted in a vague, plaintive smile. Mechanically, she took some papers from her desk tray and set down some figures on a memorandum pad.

The time clerk looked in for the daily report of absentees.

The business of the day began to float through the section in disjointed sentences.

"Wonder why cockroaches like red ink."

"If you're going to the supply room, bring me some cheesecloth."

"Me, too. My dustrag is filthy and crawling with microbes."

"You'll have to get Presidential authority for them, and Fort Peck wants six draftsmen, too."

"Buzzer, Mr. Hamilton."

"I like fresh air, but I don't like drafts. My sinus trouble——"

Amusing Incident.

"Girls, please stop typing a minute. It's a Congressman. Yes? M as in money? Yes. I for ice cream. Z for zero? Z—another z? Yes. M-i-z-z—R for railroad? G for girl—I'm sorry. I don't get this name at all. Will you spell it more slowly? M-i-z-z-e-n-g-h-r-e-n-s-k-y." (Aside) "Ho-ly smokes, what a name!"

Jennie Stokes lent her gentle laughter to the chorus of amusement. Her eyes rested upon the back of the girl at the telephone.

All day long it was the same: a few minutes of dreaminess at the desk, long absences from the room.

At the close of the day they took advantage of her absence to bring the box from its hiding place and put it on Miss Stokes' desk. It was a gay parcel, wrapped in tissue paper and tied with yards and yards of pink ribbon, in harmony with the color scheme. And then Molly Malone was sent to the washroom to bring Miss Stokes.

She came as a lamb to the slaughter, her hands tightly clasped, and the color high on her cheeks.

Miss Hamilton lifted the gift box and handed it to Miss Stokes whose eyes filled with tears as she impulsively stretched out both arms to receive the offering.

Ring on Her Finger.

There was a general gasp of astonishment. Leaping Lena said afterwards: "For a minute, I thought I was going to have a stroke. My head spun round in circles and I couldn't believe my eyes."

For on the ring finger of Jennie Stokes' left hand there gleamed a diamond solitaire.

She saw their stares and almost let the gift fall as she covered the ring with her right hand. Her blush deepened, and then she lifted her head with a gesture of relief, as though she said: "Well, I'm glad it's out at last."

She extended her hand with coy pride. The tremor of it showed off the diamond sparkles to best advantage.

"I've been wanting to take you all into my confidence—you've been so kind to me—but I couldn't get up the courage. You see—"

They waited, pityingly, convinced that Lena was right, and that the poor thing had really lost her mind.

"You see, I'm—engaged to be married."

They Couldn't Believe.

"That's fine, Jennie," Lena said in a patronizing tone, and winked at the others behind her back, urging them to humor her. "Tell us all about it."

"Well, we went to high school together. I haven't seen him for 40 years, but his children are grown up and away from home, and his wife died, and he was all alone, too—"

Expressions began to change. Maybe there was a grain of truth in it.

"And last fall he went back to our old hometown and heard that I was giving up Government work and he wrote to me—"

A beautiful smile illuminated her face. "I've been carrying around his letter to read to you, but I just couldn't—I was afraid you'd laugh—I—I mean—it seemed so intimate to read aloud or to pass around—but if you want to—"

Curiosity Uppermost.

"Sure, Jennie. We'd love to." Lena was still dubious, but her curiosity prompted her to get to the bottom of things.

Miss Stokes turned her back upon them and modestly fished in the bosom of her dress for the evidence. She held it out on trembling fingers, a crumpled letter, addressed in bold but shaky handwriting: "Miss Jennie Stokes, Washington, D. C.," and a street number in the corner.

Several hands reached for it. Miss Hamilton intercepted them by laying her own hand on Jennie's, holding the letter.

"We don't want to read your personal letters, Miss Stokes," she assured the little woman gently, with her characteristic faculty for doing the right thing, "but we'd be interested to hear anything you want to tell us about it. We're all glad you're going to find happiness after you leave us."

Miss Stokes was grateful. She had not wanted to share that letter, they saw, and were ashamed of themselves for having doubted her.

Ring Examined.

"It's really very sweet," said Miss Stokes shyly. "He has a nice home on a big farm in Illinois. He says there is lots of hard work on a farm, but that needn't worry me, for there will be plenty of hired help all the time, and he wants to take care of me the rest of my life. And he said could I try to—to revive the sentiments I had for an ugly red-headed boy who knocked Jack Harmon's front teeth out because he had stolen a valentine I had sent him? He wasn't ugly, though," she protested quickly and loyally. "He was just—masculine, if you know what I mean."

She let them hold her hand and examine her ring, to convince themselves that it was as it looked—a flawless diamond and as large a one as a lady with good taste could wear.

"May I open the present now?"

"Yes, go on and open it," they chorused, wishing that they had bought something more frivolous.

"I'm going to love it, whatever it is," she assured them, fumbling at the bow. "I never dreamed of your giving me a present. I've been getting my trousseau together on my compensatory time—"

She was having trouble with the ribbon knot, but not one of the girls offered to help her. In fact, a gleam of hope danced briefly over the faces of the buying committee. Maybe she wouldn't get it undone after all.

The knot yielded. She took off the wrappings of white tissue paper, removed the lid of the box and lifted out appreciatively, one by one, the pink and wool bed socks, and the pink and wool covered electric heating pad.

She repeated her pretty thanks.

"We thought," said Lena lamely, "we thought it—was kinda practical."

Farewells Said.

Kentucky Queen, who seldom smiled, eased herself through the doorway, her face purple with suppressed mirth.

"I'll have to be going now," Miss Stokes said hesitatingly, fearing to seem impolite. "Henry is going to telephone me—long distance—at half-past 5 to tell me which train he is coming on to get me. I don't—don't want to miss his call."

She shook hands all around the circle and left a nice little individual appreciation for each one and a cordial invitation to all to visit her if they ever came to Illinois. They held her coat for her, and she went down the corridor, eyes moist and shining, with the big box under her arm, leaving a group of strangely speechless women behind.

Bunch of Dumb-bells.

And then Molly Malone smote her forehead in lamentations over the idea that had come too late.

"Aren't we the bunch of dumbbells? Why in the world didn't some of us think to tell her we could take that junk back to the store and exchange it for a nice wedding present?"

"Oh, I don't know," Leaping Lena answered in a defensive tone, and then added stoutly, "It's kinda practical. Maybe it will come in handy."

Wanda went to the locker for her coat. She was happy for Jennie Stokes, and oddly light inside, as if her heart had wings.

Survey of Paris Fall Styles Reveals Contradictions in All Parts of Wardrobe

Sufficient Clash in Fashions Certain to Prevent Monotony

Low Decolletes Good, and So Are High, Draped and Close-Fitting Necklines; Variety of Treatment Seen in Hip Designs.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE PARIS fall openings are over. Each house as usual trotted out numerous versions of what the well-dressed woman should be seen in from now until early spring.

But the conjecturing about the importance of numerous silhouttes has not subsided more than a degree or two. How could it, when every designer brought out something entirely different from all the others?

Low decolletes in drop-shoulder effects are good. High, draped and close-fitting necklines are good. Hips should be slim and moulded. Hips should be broadened with drapery. Coats should have bolero tops. Coats should be long and tight-fitting.

Benefit Through Variety.

These are only a few of the contradictions that bubbled up during the seething activity of the formal openings. Some of the silhouettes will continue to contradict each other throughout the season. This is as it should be. Otherwise the clothes situation would become pretty monotonous with every woman having the outlines of every other woman.

Silhouttes that don't live to fight it out will pass quietly from the scene the first of September. Only their creators and purchasers will mourn.

By that time the American adaptations of the Paris originals will be on the market. American buyers have already gone a long way toward weeding out those styles that might fail to win American women.

Draped Hip Idea Ignored.

Few of the buyers paid much attention to the draped hip idea. They know that women on this side of the Atlantic have lived for weeks at a time on diets of lettuce and black coffee, have worn themselves to a frazzle pedalling bicycles uphill in an effort to smooth down their hips. It is not likely these feminine martyrs will deliberately wear clothes that add to the circumference of afore-mentioned hips.

As for the battle over necklines—the forces seem evenly divided. This means high-necked, tailored evening gowns will be smart, and that low-cut frothy ones will be equally so.

High necklines will undoubtedly appear on many modish daytime frocks. Everybody from Schiaparelli to Vionnet sponsored them in at least one version. There were demure little round necks, dashing Russian-collared necks, small square necks and wee pointed necks.

Topped by Tunics.

The Russian collars invariably topped tunics that ended anywhere between the hip and the knee. The tunic idea was almost as popular with the big-time designers as the high neck effect for daytime. It has always been a favorite with American women as it can slenderize the figure or make it appear shorter. It all depends upon the length of the tunic. Long fitted ones conceal curves. Short contrasting ones take inches off the height.

Sleeves and shoulders are bound to be interesting throughout the winter season. The puff of last year failed to put in an appearance at the Paris openings, but there was everything else. Dolmans, bishops, balloons, leg-o-muttons. The last two were greatly in the minority, however.

Dolmans are used for coats and dresses with bloused bodices and tight-fitting hips. Bishop sleeves are popular for afternoon dresses. Raglans are best for sports and street things. Bracelet sleeves—so-called because they are short enough to reveal wrist bracelets—are excellent for suits, coats and dresses.

Short Skirts for Daytime.

Important Paris couturiers agreed skirts should be short for daytime. Not terrifyingly short, but certainly no longer than they were last season. Most of them cling to the figure because they are either gored or cut on the bias.

Tweeds have become brighter and rougher. Plaids are much better than monotones or heathers. Velveteen usually provides contrast in the form of scarfs, bows, collars, belts or cuffs. Tweed and satin are almost as good a combination as tweed and velveteen.

These are only the highlights of a varied mode. If there is any keynote to the fall fashions it is formality. With the exception of out-and-out sports things, clothes will be more rich, more luxurious than they have been for several seasons.

For the Cocktail Party.

Question: I am invited to a cocktail party and can't possibly take time to change my clothes before I leave the office to go to the party. Is there anything I could wear to work that would look all right during the cocktail hour?

Answer: Since the cocktail party is the least conventional of all social affairs, you won't have much difficulty in selecting a costume that can be worn to it directly from work. One of the new dark satin or rough crepe frocks designed on tailored lines would be suitable. In fact, you may wear any costume that would be correct for the street.

Flapping Berets.

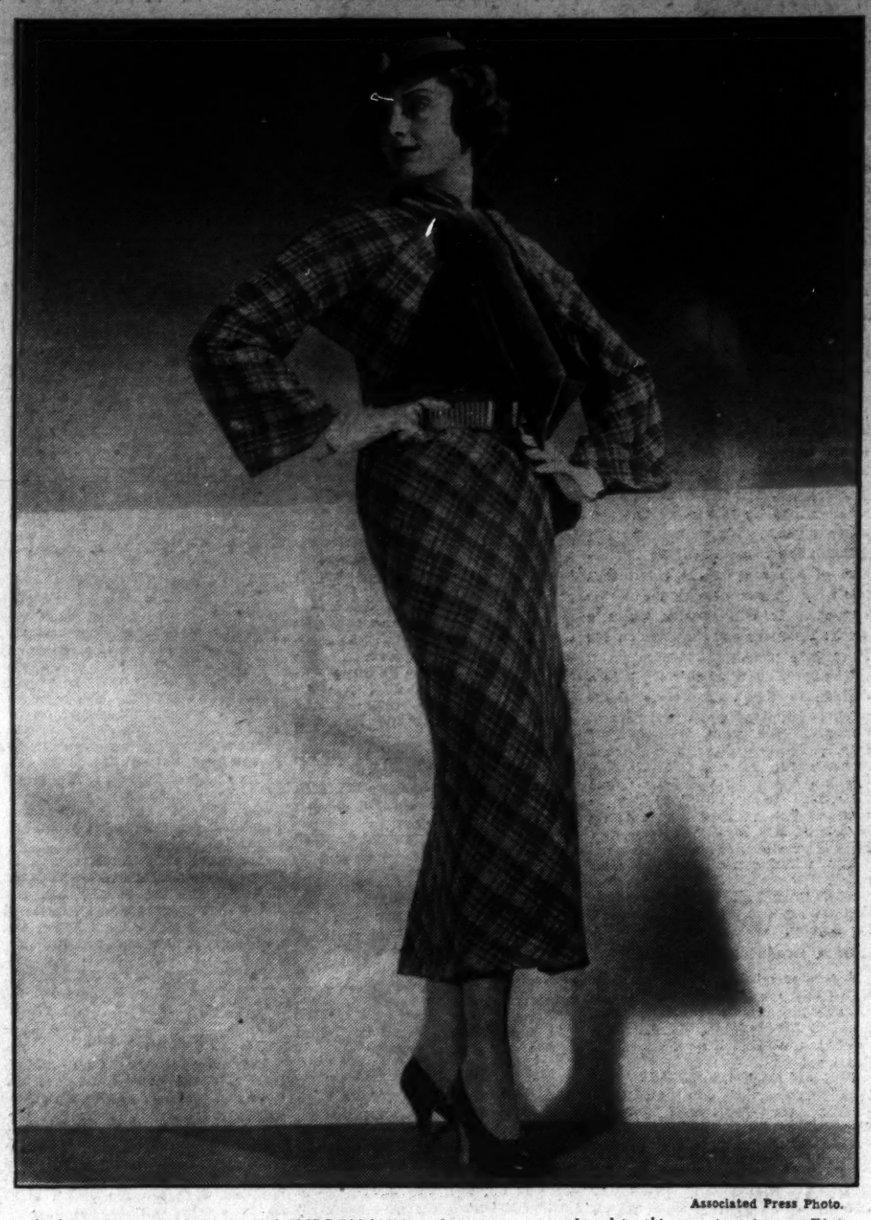

Question—Wide-brimmed hats are much more becoming to me than these pancake beret affairs all the shops are showing. But are brimmed hats going to be worn this fall? And even if they aren't, don't you think I should buy something that is becoming rather than something that is merely stylish?

Answer—Few wide-brimmed hats will be worn this fall except for the cocktail and dinner hours. Even for those informal occasions large hats will seldom appear. Have you looked at the new big flapping berets that shade the eyes as bewitchingly as a wide-brimmed hat? Watteau shapes are also fashionable this season and while they perch precariously on top of the head, they do cast alluring shadows over the face. They should be becoming to you and they are undeniably stylish.

Length of Dresses.

Question—Although I've been told long dresses are the proper thing to wear to Sunday night supper parties I always feel conspicuous in one at small gatherings. Often when I go to these affairs the other girls are in street-length dresses. Some of them even wear spectator sports things. Which is correct?

Answer—It all depends on who is giving the party and who is to attend it. If the Sunday night supper is a jolly gathering of neighbors or business associates the girls may wear street-length dresses, even spectator sports frocks. But if your host and hostess are in the habit of dressing for dinner every night and if the other guests are persons you know only slightly, you should wear a long dress. It will be expected of you and anything less will not fit in the picture.

THREE OF FALL'S MOST IMPORTANT style points are combined in this smart costume. First there's the raglan shoulder. There's the slim skirt cut on the bias. And, most fashionable of all, there's the combination of tweed and velveteen. A soft green and gray plaid tweed makes the dress. Green velveteen makes the wide scarf.

Delinquent Boys Are Reformed By Learning Use of Typewriter

NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (Spl.).—The typewriter is being used as an aid here in the reform of deliquent boys.

First used as a device to teach truants to read, it was found to have a stabilizing effect upon their character.

A report made by Miss May Lazar, research assistant in the bureau of reference, research and statistics of the board of education, tells of the aid the typewriter proved in the training of a group of deliquent boys. Many of these boys did not know their letters or even the simplest words.

"Most of the boys can now type whole compositions without supervision," reported Miss Lazar. "They asked to learn the touch method and are doing very well.

"The concentration and persistence required in typing have had a helpful effect upon the unstable cases. Considerable improvement in motor coordination is evident. Personality changes are obvious. There is an increase in steadiness and a decrease in outbursts of temperamental tantrums.

"Formerly recalcitrant pupils have been so transformed by the work that they have even come back for further reading study after they have left the school and gone to work."

Never Crush Pride, Chief Marital Rule

Atlanta Judge Gives His Views on Successful Wedded Life.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 10 (AP).—A jurist with a bent for psychoanalysis, who amicably adjusts about 2,000 potential divorce cases annually, has formulated seven rules for staying married.

"Never crush the pride of your marriage partner" is the admonition heading the list compiled by Judge Luther Z. Rosser, of the Fulton County Municipal Court.

He applies that to both husband and wife, along with two other rules for joint observance — "be willing to compromise on little things," and "cultivate interests in common and work together toward some definite goal."

Three for Husbands.

Three of the rules apply to husbands only. They are:

"Tell your wife the truth about your financial situation."

"Pay her compliments now and then."

"Make a definite move toward developing and maintaining real companionship."

The other stipulation, applying only to women, is "Remember always that at heart your husband is still a little boy."

Having found that much of the domestic unhappiness reaching his court is due to wounded pride, usually on the part of the wife, Judge Rosser regards the rule concerning that the most important of all.

"The one sure thing you can do to kill a woman's love is to crush her pride," he says. "When you do that you often destroy the woman, too.

Will Forgive a Lot.

"Women will forgive a great deal so long as you do not wound their pride. A woman may even suspect her husband of infidelity, but so long as she is not forced to acknowledge the fact openly and before the neighbors she is often inclined to shut her eyes to it."

Judge Rosser is far from believing in a double standard of morals, but he is of the opinion a man can do a bit of philandering without serious effects while a woman can not.

"When a man misbehaves," says the jurist, "he does not lose his self-respect. But when a woman misbehaves she usually does lose her self-respect, and as a consequence she sometimes goes from bad to worse."

In all cases possible Judge Rosser avoids airing marital rifts in open court. Rather, he takes the unhappy couple into chambers and tries to aid them in a satisfactory settlement of their differences. In the majority of cases he is successful.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have half-way promised to marry a man who has been divorced twice. His first marriage took place when he was in college. He was then 19. This marriage was annulled. When he was 24 he married a second time, and this marriage lasted two years. His wife got the divorce. He is now 32.

• • • •

As I understand it, his only trouble with his second wife was temperamental incompatability. I have known him over a year and enjoy being with him more than any man I've ever known. He belongs to a fine family and has a good job and many friends. He drinks occasionally, but has never drunk to excess when in my company.

• • • •

We like doing the same things, and never tire of talking together. I can't truthfully say I am madly in love with him, but I think he would make an agreeable husband. I am 30 years old and have been in the business world 10 years. I have heard that a woman's chances of marrying dwindle rapidly after the age of 25, and I have no desire to go on working all my life. Do you think I would be doing the wise thing to marry him?

QUESTIONER.

DEAR QUESTIONER: The conventional answer, of course, is never, never marry a man unless you're madly in love with him; can't live without him, &c., &c. But only a woman can understand what it means to another of her sex to be able to write "Mrs." before her name; what it means to let a man foot the bills; what it means to say good-by—even should it later prove to have been only au revoir—to the business world after ten years of treadmill routine; what it means, to the feminine sense of the fitness of things, to see a man's effects about the house; what it means to be able to speak as one with authority on the foibles of men; what it means to have a guaranteed escort for week-ends, holidays, vacations, the thousand-and-one social enterprises that require a male as passport.

• • • •

I don't say you would be doing a wise thing to marry this man. Neither do I think it would be essentially unwise. It would be, rather, the human thing.

A woman of 30 is old enough to stand or fall by her own decisions. One who has been in the business world 10 years should know men well enough to weigh with passable accuracy the husbandly qualifications of a suitor for her hand.

• • • •

If you really know your man, his previous matrimonial failures mean nothing in particular. If you realize that a marriage of companionship on your part may be considerably more difficult to negotiate successfully than a marriage of mutually high romance, and yet are willing to take it for what it offers—go ahead.

Plan Outlined For Removing Double Chin

Diet and Exercise, Cream and Strap Treatment Necessary.

By Frances Mangum.

IT ISN'T so much how many chins you have as the way you carry them. Almost anybody who walks, sits, stands or sleeps with face pulled chestward will have a double chin.

If you have a double chin there are four things you can do about it. First of all if it is the result of excess body weight see a doctor and find a sensible way of dieting. Second, exercise your neck. Don't do violent twisting and straining—it's bad on the contour.

Try something simple like this: Assume proper standing posture, feet about 18 inches apart, head up, chest high, shoulders back, abdomen in. Stand tall.

Place hands on hips. Do not move the body as you turn your head as far right as possible. Repeat five times. Now to the left. Repeat five times. Relax.

During relaxation periods don't neglect the chin strap! If you haven't one why don't you look around in the shops? There are numerous kinds.

PILLAR TO POST

Georgetown Visitation Convent's Walls Hold Priceless Relics.

MONEY and time, the supreme worldly concerns of most people, mean little or nothing to the sisters of the Georgetown Visitation Convent. Founded in 1799, the school contains paintings and relics of untold value that those in charge have refused to part with for any amount of money.

• • • •

In a glass case they keep a vestment made of cloth of gold, that was once the coronation robe of the Emperor Yturbide of Mexico, whose three daughters graduated from the school when President John Quincy Adams delivered the address. The vestment is used only once a year at midnight mass on Christmas. Charles X of France sent the beautiful altar piece, Mary and Martha, painted by Mme. Le Brun, and the crystal altar lamp that still hangs in the chapel.

• • • •

When the charming and accomplished daughter of Maj. Gen. Winfield Scott, of Mexican War fame, entered the convent as Sister Mary Emanuel, she brought with her a number of rare works of art, including a beautiful "Coronation of the Virgin," that has been attributed to Murillo. In comparatively recent times, the late Joseph Leiter contributed a crucifix of priceless value from Rome.

THE original schoolhouse was a crude frame building built on a foundation of logs, and the poverty of the nuns was so great that the snow blew in the cracks and they slept on straw pallets and shivered. Today, while the buildings seen from the street are of very plain architecture, the 40 acres behind them are planted with vineyards, orchards and beautiful gardens with broad spreading trees. Some of the trees are estimated to be hundreds of years old.

• • • •

During the War of 1812 the nuns and pupils watched from the garret windows the burning of Washington by the British and during the Civil War the Government sought to take over the property for military purposes when Gen. Scott intervened.

• • • •

Many notable figures of that time married graduates of the convent, including the Union general, William Tecumseh Sherman, and the Confederate, Gen. Johnson. Stephen A. Douglas, Lincoln's political opponent, found his bride there, and so did Gen. Beauregard and Gen. Sheridan.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, Washington Irving, Daniel Webster and Gen. Andrew Jackson sent daughters and nieces there. Mrs. Ella L. Dorsey, over 90 years old and still living in Washington, is a graduate who shed luster on her school by writing "Midshipman Jack." Miss Ann Squire, Mrs. John R. Williams and her three daughters, Mrs. Charles P. Neil, Mrs. Ellen Gordon Allen, and her mother, Mrs. Walter H. Gordon, widow of the major general, are among the Washington alumnae.

• • • •

The culture acquired there can not be taught, it can only be assimilated from the dark-veiled nuns with lovely, pure faces, expressive of gentle characters and sweet, tranquil lives. The school holds it own intellectually with all other schools, and among the nuns are four who have Ph. D.s. Cloistered as they are, they are conversant with current events.

• • • •

The school has a projection room and one of the nuns was the second woman in the United States able to operate a moving picture machine. The picture they liked best was the German film, "Cradle Song," that dramatized their calling.

Woman's Brains and Talent, Not Sex Appeal, Make Her Lasting Figure in History

By Malvina Lindsay,
Woman's Page Editor.

WOMEN MAY NOW SAFELY take their brains out of hiding, for no less celebrated and cynical a bachelor than George Jean Nathan has debunked the material conception of "It." Writing on "The Sex Appeal Myth" in the current Esquire, Mr. Nathan maintains that talent and not physical allure gives a woman lasting popularity on the stage or in the movies. He cites as examples Katherine Cornell, Helen Hayes, Ina Claire, Lynn Fontaine and Eva LeGallienne. These, he says (and 90 per cent of women will rise up and cheer), will outlast the Mae Wests and Jean Harlows.

• • • •

Strangely, women rather than men have perpetuated the sex appeal myth. Men, after all, are not such fools as hen party discussions make them, and they never became so enrapt in the spell of the Harlows and Wests as their wives and sweethearts believed. It was the women's patronage anyway that the movie press agents were after, and there was no better way to get it than to noise around that a super-sorceress was exhibiting her bag of tricks.

• • • •

However, history has antedated Mr. Nathan in undoing both the sex appeal and the beautiful-and-dumb traditions. The most superficial research will reveal that many of the world's outstanding enchantresses have been highbrows—even feminists.

THE QUEEN OF SHEBA, who triumphed over Solomon's 700 wives, was an eager seeker after knowledge, the efficient ruler of a maritime nation, and one of the foremost business women of all time. Cleopatra spoke eight languages, was versed in history, the arts and sciences and was a skilled musician. The notorious Ninon de L'Enclos was a patron of the arts, a benefactor of Voltaire, and the author of such lines as "The joy of the spirit shows its strength."

• • • •

Mme. Recamier, the world's best listener, was a scholar and translator of note. George Sand, loved by Musset, Chopin and others in spite of her trousers and black cigars, was a novelist and brilliant conversationalist. Even Lady Hamilton labored unceasingly to improve herself, to show, she said, that "a pretty woman is not necessarily a fool."

• • • •

True, these women had personality coupled with ability, as, indeed, have the actresses cited by Mr. Nathan. And there again is another puzzle—the genesis of that intangible magnetism that is not grounded in physical pulchritude.

ARTISTS HAVE SOUGHT in many ways to define it, to portray it. Willa Cather in "A Lost Lady" makes a telling attempt when she has her heroine suggest a beauty beyond what is revealed. Katharine Fullerton Gerould, in one of her notable short stories, sums up what should be a woman's elusive attraction as "intimations of immortality."

• • • •

Homer perhaps came the nearest to capturing it when he created Helen of Troy. Of her he is meager in physical description, but he explains much in this sentence:

"In her sweet countenance shine looks like the goddesses."

What can that mean? Perhaps a secret fire? Perhaps a pulsing vitality of spirit? Perhaps an inner sufficiency? Peraps the transfiguration of love?

• • • •

Whatever it may be, it is something born of mind, of mental sensitiveness. It may come to the homely, to the lowly, to the weak, but never to the unaware.

Quick Divorce Idea Spreads All Over World

THE divorce-while-you-wait movement seems to be spreading throughout the world.

Lawyers estimate that 90 per cent of the divorces granted in the United States are of the speedy trial method with arrangements completed in advance. While Reno, Nev., with its six weeks' residence requirement remains the divorce capital of the country, other places are offering formidable rivalry. Arkansas has a 90-day residence law and Oklahoma, Idaho and Arizona have short residence requirements.

The Soviet Union leads other nations of the world in speed and simplicity in granting divorce decrees. There either party to a divorce may have a decree for the asking.

Several Mexican provinces offer quick and easy divorce. The Federal District of Mexico and Lower California in 1932 permitted divorces by mutual consent to be obtained within 15 days. These Mexican divorces, however, are not recognized in some States in this Nation.

Divorce by mutual consent became a law in Spain on October 16, 1931. Holland has a three-months' residence law. Paris, once the mecca of divorce seekers, has recently clamped down on quick divorces to foreigners.

Two Canadian Women Teams On Ice Today

Hockey Matches Set for Olympic Arena at Lake Placid.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

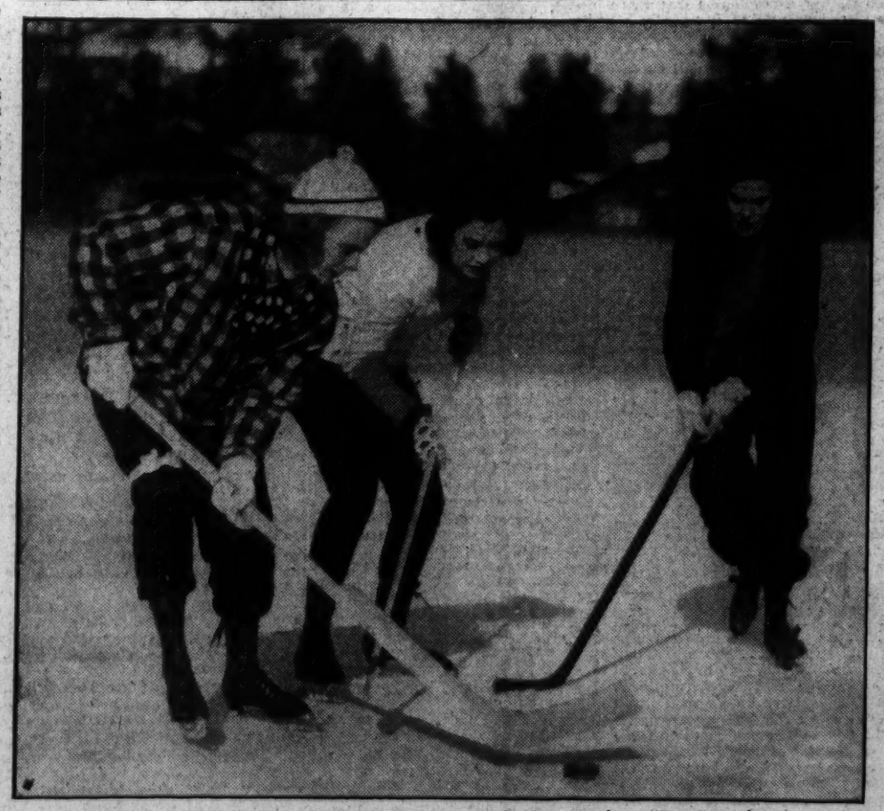

WHILE the sun beats down and the heat thickens, two women's teams will be playing a cooler type of sport this week-end in ice hockey matches at Lake Placid.

For the first time, Canadian women ice-hockey players will be seen in the United States. The Maroons, of the Montreal Ladies Hockey Club, will be playing the Canadians All-Star Ladies' team, as the first feature of the Montreal Royal and St. Nicholas games to be held in the Olympic Arena today and tomorrow.

American women play ice hockey, but not in the organized manner of the Canadians. The opportunity for American women skaters to see women players in top form should have a good effect on our own game. United States skaters who will enter the figure skating events of the games represent the Skating Club of Boston, New Haven Skating Club, Philadelphia Skating Club, Ice Club of Baltimore and the Skating Club of New York.

The Maroons, who were not scored against during their first ten games last winter, have on their defense Simon Cauchon, the leading woman hockey player in Canada. The Canadian All-Stars, picked from the best teams of the Province, have Dolly Moore, youngest player in senior hockey, and Wen Pherrill, one of Canada's greatest all-round athletes.

The stars on the two teams are also outstanding National players of softball, a game that draws thousands of spectators in Canada, and is rapidly growing here. An exhibition game of softball will be played this afternoon.

SOME PEOPLE KEEP THEMSELVES ON ICE in the hot weather. Two Canadian women's teams are playing ice hockey at Lake Placid this week-end, in the Montreal Royal and St. Nicholas games. American players are not far behind their Canadian sisters. Above are Katherine Keeney, Suzanne Welch and Mary Allen, all of Hartford, Conn.

Catarrh Induced By Face Powders

Those Having Orris Root Blamed by Doctor.

FACE powder does a heap more than take the shine off women's noses. It gives them catarrh, in the opinion of Dr. Theodore Just, aural surgeon at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London.

"Women suffer much more today from catarrh than they formerly did and I think this may be due to the orris root used in some makes of face powder," said Dr. Just at a recent conference of the British Medical Association. "I do not believe the increase in catarrhal cases is caused by women being more neurotic, a cause that is sometimes given. Many women are extremely susceptible to orris root."

Several of Dr. Just's patients suffering from catarrh have declared to him they could not use powder which contained orris root.

A's 17 Hits Win Over Nats, 8 to 6

Washington's 4 Runs in Sixth Short of Tie; Manush Fails.

Linke Pounded Out After Good Start

Rallies Are Unavailing; Bases Twice Filled in 8th Inning.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

ONE of the neatest cases of assault and battery perpetrated in Griffith Stadium this season was committed yesterday in plain view of 4,000 fans by a group of rogues from Philadelphia, known as the A's, who wielded their shillalahs with amazing vigor on a group of gentlemen known as the Nats, and got away with it.

The A's assaulted the Nats in general and battered four pitchers in particular to the extent of 17 hits which they fashioned into an 8-6 victory. This was a painful kick in the pants to Washington's first-division hopes, although no ground actually was lost as the Red Sox took a drubbing from New York.

Dietrich Is Shelled.

While the Nats used four hurlers, Philadelphia needed only two, and one of these, Specs Dietrich, almost won and lost the game unaided. Specs batted in three runs with his three hits and then presented our side with four runs—just one short of tying the score—before leaving in a huff in the sixth.

Even with the one run they got in the fifth Washington's four runs failed to tie the score because the A's batted around in the fourth and pried Ed Linke loose from his moorings with a prolific seven-hit spree that produced six runs. All of them, however, can not be charged to Linke for Alec McColl pitched a single to Frankie Higgins and it dribbled through Heinie Manush for a two-base error scoring Johnson and Foxx.

Fans Two in First.

Linke started like a tornado—fanning two men in the first—and finished like a disabled electric fan. There were a couple of scratchy hits in the uprising that drove him to cover, but the others were healthy explosions to the outfield. The kid just had an off day, I suppose. After McColl came Russell and Burke.

Dietrich was pretty good, too. For four innings Washington hits were as scarce as nudists in Lapland—none at all. But when he cracked, he cracked all over. Mahaffey rescued his faltering mate and thwarted attempted Washington rallies with a three-hit performance. Herr Heinie Manush, incidentally, was held hitless in five attempts.

First Run in Fifth.

Washington got its first run in the fifth as Schulte singled and went all the way around to third when Higgins threw wildly to first on Travis' grounder. He scored on Bolton's infield out.

Dietrich's wildness started McColl and Myer off with the first runs of the big inning. After walking them, he pitched a single to Susko. McColl scoring and Buddy scored as Manush forced Pete at second.

Cronin gave the rally added impetus with a hefty triple to deep left field, scoring Manush with the third run, and Joe personally scored the fourth on Schulte's infield out.

Falter in Pinches.

Washington hopes revived in the eighth when the team scored a run, twice filled the bases and came within an ace of tying the score, only to falter at the crucial moment. Fred Schulte's double to center started it and Travis kept it going with a single off Higgins' glove, Schulte holding second. Higgins muffed Holton's drive and the bases were loaded.

Bluege ran for Bolton. Old Dave Harris got a strangle hold on his bat, planted his feet firmly in the turf and busted one to left field that missed being a home run by a mere foot or so and dropped into Johnson's glove for an out, but it scored Schulte.

Luke Sewell batted for Russell and refilled the bases with a drive that McNair fumbled. Hope burned furiously in the hearts of the fans, but Buddy Myer extingiushed it with a tap to Williams, who threw him out.

Coleman and McNair singled to start Philadelphia's productive fourth-inning attack. Berry sacri-

Bolton Lauded By Griffith, Converted

Owner Confident of 1935; A's and Nats Battle in Two Today.

By Frank H. Young.

TIME was—and it wasn't so long ago—that Catcher Cliff Bolton was the Nats' ugly duckling, and, should a scribe absent-mindedly mention his name while in President Clark Griffith's office, he usually quickly ducked. But conditions have changed since the High Point rookie reported and came to terms with the club. Yesterday, Owner Griffith had nothing but good things to say of Cliff.

"He's really done better than I thought he would," said the Nat owner. "He has not lost his batting eye and he is doing pretty well behind the bat. His throwing has not been of the best, but you must remember that he never has had a chance to do much catching. When I sent him to the minors on three occasions, instead of teaching him to catch they put him in the outfield because of his hitting. And previous seasons he has been with us, we have given him practically no work behind the bat until Manager Cronin started concentrating on his development recently.

"Give Bolton a training camp season with the experienced backstoppers coaching him next spring and I'm confident he'll be a pretty good man behind the plate for us next season."

A postponed game of the early season will be played off at Griffith Stadium this afternoon, giving the cash customers two contests for the price of one. Al (Tommy) Thomas and Bobby Burke will do the native twirling, while Connie Mack is expected to call on Johnny Marcum and Alton (Rube) Benton.

Walter Johnson, Cleveland manager, who is recuperating from a recent illness, arrived at his Alta Vista home yesterday morning. "I felt better the moment I stepped off the train," he said. "I plan to loaf around the 'farm' for a couple of days and to take charge of the Indians when they arrive here Tuesday. I think I will sneak out to the park and see the Washington game Sunday."

It was "amateur day" at the stadium yesterday morning, with Manager Cronin and President Griffith giving several youngsters the once over. A fly chaser named Rice, who hails from Richmond, made the biggest impression, the youngster showing plenty of speed and native ability, to say nothing of quite a punch at the tee. Dick Knight, Heurich's outfielder, also impressed the Nat bosses. Dick Keegin, Dor-A outfield star, and Catcher John Hawes, of the St. Mary's Celtics, also showed that they knew what the game was all about.

Cather Ed Phillips, recently sent by the Nats to the Albany International League Club, returned yesterday. Both of the Albany catchers, who were injured, suddenly reported their ailments cured and so Phillips was not needed.

Johnny Stone, likely will return to the Washington line-up next week. He has been giving his sprained ankle several severe tests during the past few days and was quite enthusiastic yesterday over the progress made. "It don't hurt me any to jog about on it and I did a little running today with no ill effects. I believe I'll be ready to get back in action in three or four days."

Wilson, Confident, Signs With Phils

Philadelphia, Aug. 10 (AP).—Lewis (Hack) Wilson, former $33,000-a-season home run slugger of big time baseball, dipped into the National League clothes closet for the fifth time today, came up with a Phillies' uniform and prepared to take up an outfield assignment once again.

With a confident look at Baker Bowl's short right-field wall, the former star penned his name to a Phils contract this afternoon and was informed he would get into the line-up tomorrow.

"I'm only 34," Wilson said, "and I figure to have at least three or four more seasons of baseball in my system. All that I need to do is get rid of a little excess fat and I will be all set to show the fans of this city a little hitting."

Allison, Bell In Brookline Net Final

Beat Van Ryn, Tidball; Sarah Palfrey Wins Women's Title.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 10 (AP). Two outstanding products of the University of Texas' famed tennis nursery, Wilmer Allison and Berkeley Bell, today won the right to clash for one of the most-prized trophies of the turf court game, the historic Longwood Bowl.

Allison, standard bearer of the small delegation of standpatters who have retained their "Longies," qualified for his second bowl final since 1928 by defeating his doubles partner of long standing, Johnny Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, 4—6, 8—6, 6—4, 6—1. The shorts-clad Bell turned back Jack Tidball, of Hollywood, Calif., 8—10, 6—4, 3—6, 11—9, 6—2, after two and three-quarter hours.

Very Much on Game.

Bell, enjoying the most successful season of his Eastern grass career which, like Allison's, was launched after he won the 1929 intercollegiate championship, opened in erratic fashion against Tidball, who was very much on his game. The Texan tumbler, who now plays out of New York, kept banging away as he worked himself out of his slump and squared the match by capturing the fourth set, after Tidball had three match points in the eleventh, sixteenth and eighteenth games. The battle was won when he broke Tidball's service in the nineteenth game of that set, for Tidball blew sky high in the vital fifth set.

Allison and Bell grew up together in Austin, Tex., and they have opposed each other so many times that they have lost track of their standings previous to this year. This season they have clashed three times and Bell is one up.

It was a dismal day for Tidball, for when he and Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore, lined up against George Lott and Lester Stoefen in the upper half doubles semifinal, the U. S. Davis Cup heroes polished them off, 6—2, 7—5.

Bell gained his second final with the assistance of Eugene McCauliff, of Yonkers, N. Y. They drew Allison and Van Ryn as their semifinal doubles opponents and scored a 14—12, 6—4 upset.

Sarah Palfrey Wins.

Sarah Palfrey, Brookline's pride and heroine of the recent Wightman Cup play against the British, clinched the victory in the high class women's invitation tourney by defeating Jane Sharp, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—2.

In the women's doubles final, the top seeded Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, wife of the unsuccessful semifinalist, and Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, Calif., another Wightman Cup veteran, had an easy romp while turning back Helen Fulton, Chicago, and Catherine Wolf, Elkhart, Ind., 6—2, 6—0.

Mohawks to Schedule Eight Football Games

The Mohawks will have a football team this year and will schedule four games away from home during the season.

The out-of-town games will be played in Norfolk, Richmond, Charlotte and Baltimore, and one may possibly be scheduled in Jersey City. Four games will be scheduled at home, and may be played at Griffith Stadium.

Ruth in Last Season As Regular, He Says

BABE RUTH.

Babe, Troubled by Knees, Would Like Managerial Role in 1935; Hints at Boston Job and Week-End Playing.

BOSTON, Aug. 10 (AP).—George Herman (Babe) Ruth, the Yankees' aging "Sultan of Swat," announced today he would complete his active major league career at the end of the present season.

"I'm definitely through as a regular player at the end of this season," the Babe declared in an interview.

Ruth, who was troubled with his ankles last year and with his knees this season, now seems fully satisfied that his physical condition demands his retirement as a regular. He played with the Yankees today against the Red Sox, but retired in the eighth after hitting safely.

Would Like Managership.

"I really don't know what the future holds for me—time alone will tell," he said. "I would like to remain in the game as a manager and perhaps do a little pinch hitting on Saturdays and Sundays or days when I figured it would help the gate."

Ruth said he planned to join John Shibe and Earl Mack in a trip to Japan following the world series.

Hints at Boston Job.

"There is nothing I would like better than to finish my career in Boston where I started. Also I would like to wind up this season by playing on a championship Yankee club and get into the world series.

"I don't know what I'll do next season, but I won't go hungry. I have enough money now to keep the wolf from the door. I started at $600 per season and at the peak of my career I received $80,000—more than the President of the United States gets."

Giants Victors; Hubbell Wins His 17th

NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (AP).—The Giants continued their heavy hitting today to defeat the Braves, 6 to 3, in the first game of a series of three and to give Carl Hubbell his seventeenth mound victory of the season.

The big blow of the game was Mel Ott's thirtieth homer, which put him only six circuit swats behind Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees, major league leader.

The clout came off Huck Betts' delivery with the score tied at 1-1 in the sixth inning and started a 4-run rally that decided the game.

Wild Throw Costly.

After Ott lined his homer into the lower right-field stands, Phil Weintraub drew a pass and went to third when Pinky Whitney made a wild throw of Travis Jackson's bunt. He scored on Harry Danning's fly. Johnny Vergez then drove one high into the left-field stands for a homer that completed the rally and sent Betts to the showers.

New York added its final run off Fred Frankhouse in the seventh when Critz singled, progressed to third on Bill Terry's sacrifice and Ott's grounder and scored on Weintraub's single, which came after Catcher Frank Hogan had dropped a foul that would have been the third out.

Cards, on Spree, Rout Cubs, 17 to 3

St. Louis, Aug. 10 (AP).—The third-place Cardinals added to their chances in the pennant race today by going on a batting spree which defeated the second-place Chicago Cubs, 17 to 3.

Six singles in a row gave the Cardinals nine runs in the third and knocked out Lon Warneke, the starting Cub pitcher, and Tinning. Joiner finished the game with indifferent success.

Tex Carleton held the losers to seven hits, while the Red Birds collected 17. Manager Frank Frisch hit safely four times. Collins, for St. Louis, knocked his twenty-fourth home run of the season in the fifth. Galan and Stainback also hit for the circuit.

Boston Bull Grieves for Robbie

ATLANTA, Aug. 10 (AP).—Cracker, a perky Boston bulldog with standing ears, sat up on top of the ramp at Ponce De Leon Park and watched for the big fellow to come up.

Cracker was hungry and it was time for the big fellow to come along, tickle him behind the ears and open a can of food. Fact is, it was past time.

Every time somebody came up the ramp Cracker jumped up but it wasn't the big fellow with the booming voice who sometimes talked baby talk to him when no one was around. Funny about him being late, he never was before.

A big yellow car drove up and Cracker ran to it. A strange man got out but Cracker jumped on the seat and sniffed where the big fellow always sat. He settled down, he could wait.

Up came Nub, a Negro handy man around the Cracker's ball park, but the voice didn't sound like Nub. Sort of choked. Then Nub put his head on the car and cried.

Finally Cracker went back to the ramp. Some men were standing around. Cracker heard them talking about sending him to Baltimore where Wilbert Robinson's grandchildren could play with him.

Well, that was all right, if the big fellow went along. Right now it was 'way past meal time and Cracker wished the big fellow would come stalking up the ramp.

Harvard Ace Sues Cubs for $20,000

Boston, Aug. 10 (AP).—Eddie McGrath, Harvard baseball captain in 1931, filel suit for $20,000 against the Chicago Cubs today.

He alleyed that in the spring of 1931 he made an oral agreement to play with the Cubs after his graduation. He said that Rogers Hornsby was manager of the Chicago National League Club at that time and William L. Veeck was president.

McGrath claimed he was promised $5,000 in cash and $500 monthly salary, which he accepted. Several other clubs, he claimed, made offers for his services, but he, considering himself bound to the Cubs, rejected them. McGrath said he reported to the Cubs soon after he was graduated and he alleged they refused to carry out their part of the agreement.

65 to Enter Five Farms Golf Test

By Dave Herman.

AN imposing field of 65 golfers from six States and the District of Columbia, 25 of whom are from Washington clubs, will compete for 14 qualifying berths in the National amateur sectional trials at the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club on Tuesday, August 21, according to the official pairings and starting times released last night by the United States Golf Association.

Seventeen of the contestants in the 36-hole divisional test are registered from Baltimore. Virginia has 12 entered; North Carolina, 4; Pennsylvania, 3; South Carolina, 2, and Tennessee, 1. Cumberland, Md., has one entry.

Sixty-seven players actually will go to the post when the barrier is released at 8:30 a. m., since two "floaters," Dave Davis, of Culver City, Calif., and Jennings B. Gordon, of the Atlanta district, have been granted permission to play in the Middle Atlantic trials. As a result of their transfer, Davis and Gordon must return a score equal to, or lower than, the highest qualifying score in the district wherein they play. Hence, they will not be charged as qualifiers at Five Farms provided they comply with this requirement.

24 Sectional Trials.

Sectional trials will be conducted on 24 golfing fronts from coast to coast. A total of 180 players will be eligible for the match play rounds in the championship proper at historic Brookline, starting September 10. Thirteen of this number already have been exempt from qualification.

The National Amateur shapes up as the most attractive in history, since the medal ordeal has been abolished, and the golfers will plunge into the man-to-man battles the very opening day.

Chandler Harper Entered.

From Virginia will come Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, winner of the medal for the last two years; Billy Howell, 1931 National Amateur semifinalist; Bobby Riegel, of Richmond, conqueror of Roger Peacock in the Middle Atlantic finals at Hot Springs, and Aulick Burke, Petersburg sensation. Baltimore will bank heavily on Ernie Caldwell, Harris Jones and Don McPhail. Charleston, S. C. is entering two stars in Thad Street, jr., and Lewis Johnson, jr., while Allen Smith, of Biltmore Forest, is the most prominent of the North Carolinanians participating. Tennessee's lone challenger is Judd Brunley, ace player of the Cherokee Country Club, Knoxville.

Yanks Hang Up Farcical Win Over Sox

Bat Out of Order for Four Innings; Score, 10-3; 19th for Gomez.

BOSTON, Aug. 10 (AP).—Vernon (Goofy) Gomez, the slender southpaw, won his nineteenth victory of the season today as the Yankees batted out a 10-to-3 victory over the Red Sox in a game that had almost as many odd features as good ones.

The Yankees batted in the wrong order for four innings before the matter was called to Umpire Emmet Ormsby's attention just in time to deprive Bill Dickey of a hit in the fifth. Ben Chapman had batted out of turn three times and Dickey twice before the catcher finally was called out for the error. Later in the game Dickey lost a run through leaving third before Chapman's fly was caught.

The Red Sox "muffed" one in the seventh, when Sam Byrd and Tony Lazzeri tried a double steal and Lazzeri was allowed to score from second when Byrd was being run down.

Browns Down Chisox; Hadley Grants 5 Hits

Chicago, Aug. 10 (AP).—Swelling the score with a five-run spree in the eighth inning, the St. Louis Browns defeated the White Sox, 8 to 2, today in the opener of a four-game series. Irving (Bump) Hadley held the Chicagoans to five hits. Harland Clift hit a homer.

Jack Hayes returned to second base for the White Sox after being out since July 4 with a cracked thumb. It was only his fifth game since May 8, an elbow operation having sidelined him previously.

Tigers Win 10th In Row by Rally

Overcome Tribe's 5-1 Lead and Triumph in 11 Innings, 6-5.

Rowe Drives In Decisive Marker

Seeds' Triple Scores 3 in 7th but Harder Fails to Hold Lead.

DETROIT, Aug. 10 (AP).—Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the rangy right-hander of the Detroit Tigers, helped himself to a 6-to-5 decision over Cleveland here today in an 11-inning contest, which saw the Tigers come from behind once more to run their string of consecutive victories to ten.

Rowe went the route for Detroit, and drove in the winning run in the last of the eleventh, a high fly to Holland in left field, which permitted Hank Greenberg to score the deciding run from third after the catch.

For six innings it was a nip and tuck battle between Rowe and Hildebrand, Cleveland's starting choice. The score was tied at 1 all, but Seeds slammed out a double in the seventh with the bases full, scoring Trosky, Burnett and Hildebrand. The blow gave the Tribe a 4-to-1 lead. When the Tigers added a tally in the last of the seventh, Hildebrand was removed for Mel Harder to head off the customary late inning rally of Detroit.

Tie Score in Eighth.

Harder proved less effective than Hildebrand, and Detroit got to him for four hits and 3 runs in the eighth to tie the score.

In the last of the eleventh, Greenberg singled, and both Owen and Fox were safe on bunts to fill the bases. Rowe followed with his fly to Holland which permitted Greenberg to bring in the winning run.

Stepbrother Easily Wins Second Victory at Narragansett Park, Paying $10.10

3-Year-Old Scores by Length

Friar Mark Is Second; Red Badge Weakens, Finishes Third.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 10 (AP).—Turned back by narrow margins in his two previous races, G. L. Hamilton's Stepbrother today came back to win his second race of the Naragansett meeting in accounting for the mile dash, which featured an all-claiming card at the Rhode Island course.

The time of 1:40 2-5 was slow for the fast track, but the 3-year-old son of Canter easily defeated seven other platers. At the finish he held a length advantage over A. A. Baroni's Friar Mark with Red Badge four more lengths to the rear to take the show. Stepbrother paid $10.10.

Red Badge broke in front of the field, but Louis Fallon rated the Hamilton gelding close to the pace to the half-mile post. Coming out of the back stretch, Fallon sent Stepbrother to the front, and he easily held sway to the finish line, while Red Badge weakened before the closing rush of Friar Mark.

Maine Chance Wins.

Saratoga Race Track, Aug. 10 (AP). Thanks in part to Jockey Silvio Coucci, who rode two winners in the first four races, favorite players were able to recoup some of their losses here today. When Maine Chance, split choice with Open Range at 9 to 5, won the Mohawk, a claiming stakes, it gave the talent a clean slate up to that point. Maine Chance, owned by Mrs. T. J. Lewis, who races in the name of Mr. Nightingale, drove first home by 1¼ lengths over W. Graham's Open Range, with William Woodward's Vicar three lengths farther back in the show position.

The thirty-second running of this 1-mile test for 3-year-olds drew seven starters, with the value to the winner $1,845. The time was 1:38 1-5. Three in the field were saddled by Jim Fitzsimmons.

Capsized Speedster and Fire Enliven Baltimore Regatta

BALTIMORE, Aug. 10 (AP).—The capsizing of a speeding hydroplane and a fire aboard a racing runabout added excitement to the power boat races which featured the opening of the Maryland Tercentenary regatta here today.

In the 225-cubic-inch National championship hydroplane races, the Scram, Philadelphia entry with Taylor Gobel at the wheel, went into a turn almost wide open, turned over and hurled Gobel and his mechanic into the bay. They were rescued by Red Cross life-savers.

Shortly thereafter Fred Hahn's Lady Pep, another Philadelphia craft, caught fire during a race and flames leaped high from the cockpit. Hahn, however, had the fire out by the time rescuers arrived.

Riptide Is Heat Winner.

Roaring home through a long lane of approximately 150 colorfully decorated yachts, from which thousands viewed the races, A. G. Schmidlapp's Riptide, from New York, won the day's heat of the hydroplane National championship series.

Al Schwatler, at Riptides wheel, drove a masterful race, but Lady Luck also was aboard. Riptide was the only entry which negotiated the four 2½-mile laps without interruption. Scram turned over; Miss Westchester, another New York entry, driven by Pop Hammond, had engine trouble, and Wilmer III, Baltimore entry, had her engine die once during the race.

Making even faster time than the larger hydroplanes, Emancipator III, National champion, with S. Mortimer Auerbach, of Chicago and Atlantic City, at the wheel, was an easy winner in the 125-cubic inch displacement class. Auerbach's other boat, Emancipator II, finished second.

The program today included a number of sail and rowing races. Tomorrow the National championship contests of the American Association of Amateur Oarsmen will get under way. The annual running of the National Sweepstakes Trophy—contest for the fastest single-motored power boats built—is also on the program.

Dear Al: Narragansett Park, Aug. 10.

Here's my swan song. I am returning home tomorrow to the home of the New Deal, or bum shuffle, depending on whether you prefer the Donkey or Elephant for your mount.

Mike will not have to worry about ponies for some time. He essayed the combined role of diplomat and politician in the hospital last night and had about convinced all that it was a measly shame and not measles.

To the doctor Mike confided that Reigh Rose in the first race today was a bottled up good thing, and should be played straight only; that he, alone of all clockers, had caught the fast work, and that was the reason he had been hustled away from the track to the pesthouse.

The doctor told the internes, the internes the nurses and the nurses the patients. All were sworn to secrecy. When Reigh Rose finished second, it broke the outfit. That it paid $7.10 for place helped no one. Mike had said to play it on the nose only. What he knows now is a plenty, for he has been told by all that he is in for life; provided, of course, some nut doesn't murder him.

Two winners again today, and, as usual, a bunch of seconds. Adios.

JOE.

First race—Wishing Ring has the rail and early speed. May win. Grace Blotter and Hernando for place and show.

Second race—I prefer Cantersine, Gold Step and Cutie Face in this very open affair.

Fifth race—For fast track am going to Piety at a price. Zekiel and Character for minor awards. Mud would make a big difference. Jim Dandy and Character eat it.

Sixth race—Bradley is sending Jockey Meade and Barn Swallow down from Saratoga for this stake. I like Roustabout for place and Gray Lady may show.

Seventh race—The entry, Gallardia and Ridgeview. Flying Cadet and Speedy Skippy have plenty of early speed.

Eighth race—Prince Tokalon, scratched today, should win. Gay Party and Fair Billy are outsiders with a chance.

Should the ninth, or substitute race be run, old Plumage seems a good thing. Nothing else stands out on the entire card. Watch out if it rains.

Yankee Victor In 40-Mile Boat Test

Finishes 8 1-5 Seconds Ahead of Rainbow; Vanitie Crosses Line Third.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 10 (AP).—Yankee, Boston's candidate for the defense of the America's Cup against Endeavour, Tom Sopwith's British challenger, today defeated her two rivals, Rainbow and Weetamoe, in a race of 40-odd miles from New London, Conn., to this port.

Yankee, skippered by Charles Francis Adams, former Navy Secretary, crossed the finish line off Brenton's reef eight and one-fifth seconds ahead of Rainbow, Harold S. Vanderbilt's recently constructed candidate.

Vanitie Is Third.

Vanitie, Gerard Lambert's old and now ineligible cup boat, followed Rainbow by three or four lengths, and Frederick Prince's Weetamoe was last.

Yankee fetched the race rock buoy just outside New London, but Rainbow was forced to tack to get around it. Vanitie barely fetched the buoy. About 4 miles past Race Rock, Rainbow worked past Yankee and then it was nip and tuck between them until Joint Judith was reached. They were never more than 200 or 300 yards apart.

Off Point Judith, Yankee worked through Rainbow's lee, after trying repeatedly to get by to weather of her. Her margin of victory was worked out during the last few miles of the contest, with the breeze making and the sea choppy.

Kieva Spurts to Score In Feature at Detroit

Detroit, Aug. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Fred M. Alger's 3-year-old filly Kieva was booted ot a half-length victory over Pennecote in the feature event on today's Michigan State Fair Grounds card, coming from far behind to battle it out in the stretch and just last long enough to get in front as the pack approached the finish line. Two lengths behind Pennecote was Genteel Lady.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANCEL, $20.30, $10.60, $7.70; REIGH ROSE, $7.10, $4.90; SUSPICIOUS, $7.00.

CANCEL, a forward factor from the start, drew into a good lead rounding the far turn and, delivering a clever brand of speed for the remainder of the way, was never threatened. REIGH ROSE went prominently placed from the outset, but was unable to keep pace with the winner. SUSPICIOUS, well up from the beginning, weakened slightly through the stretch and barely lasted to save third from BATTLING KNIGHT. The latter, well up, was unable to reach the leaders when placed under punishment, but would have been third in another stride. PAPER PROFITS was never a factor. DONA DULCIN went evenly. THE RAKE broke fast, but dropped out of it soon after the start. LADY POLLY was away slowly and trailed far back throughout.

SECOND RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old fillies; maidens. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:06. Winner, S. W. Labrot's gr. f. (2), by Sir Greysteel—Activity. Trained by W. Irvine. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:07 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLAST FURNACE, $9.80, $5.50, $5.00; LISA BELLE, $4.00, $3.40; SWEET MOLLIE, $8.70.

BLAST FURNACE went to the front in the opening sixteenth, drew into a good lead, but had to be vigorously ridden through the closing furlong to hold LISA BELLE safe. The latter, away slowly, worked her way up steadily in the first three furlongs, came through on the inside after leaving the back stretch, was catching the winner at every stride, and would probably have been the winner in another stride. SWEET MOLLIE was a prominent factor for the entire trip.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:38½. Off at 3:41½. Winner, H. T. Archibald's br. f. (3), by Westy Hogan—Candy Star. Trained by G. L. Arvin. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:12 2-5.

STAROGAN went into command soon after the start, was rated along in front under steadying restraint and, holding on gamely through the stretch, was never seriously threatened. ELDEE worked his way up gradually and, obtaining clear sailing on the inside, was along in the last strides to take the place. HEEDLESS GAL, away fast, was rated along in closest pursuit of the pace, but began bearing out when placed under punishment in the stretch. BABY CHARD closed some ground. COGAY went evenly throughout.

WESTYS DUKE, away fast, drew into a daylight advantage in the opening quarter-mile, was rated along under slight restraint and drew out steadily through the last furlong. HOME LOAN, in nearest attendance of the pace, continued throughout with good energy to the end. MAD BULL, quickest to begin, was unable to keep pace with the first two, but held the others safe throughout. SAND CLOUD, slow to begin, moved up briefly rounding the far turn, came to the outside of the leaders in the stretch and, despite being placed under punishment, was unable to improve his position. Anna Bono, 15, Takes Two Titles as Georgetown Wins Playground Swim Finals

100 Lassies Participate In Events

Victors Score 9 Firsts; Municipal Is Second, Rosedale Third.

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD ANN BONO, women's District 50-yard free style record holder, again revealed herself the most promising swimming prospect to come forth in Washington in recent years by easily annexing the city crawl and back-stroke crowns for 15 and 16 year old girls yesterday in the playground championships held at Municipal Pool.

The Western High School girl's double triumph helped the girls from Georgetown Playground pool to run off with the team title as 14 new champions were named. Georgetown earned 73 points to 40 for Municipal and 31 for Rosedale. The winning squad copped nine firsts to four for Municipal and three for Rosedale.

More Than 100 Vie.

More than 100 girls competed over the 25-yard course for the city titles.

Sharing the spotlight with Miss Bono were Anna and Mary Liegus, also of Georgetown, who rolled up 18 points in four events of the 16 and 17-year-old classes.

The speedy youngster literally flashed through the water despite the unusually short course and won the crawl race going away, with Anna Liegus second. In the backstroke, Miss Bono asserted her versatility by showing the way to Ann Tilson, fast McKinley Tech swimmer, in the record time of 18 3-5 seconds. Miss Bono's 13 3-5 seconds for the crawl was the fastest achieved in the history of the annual championships.

Girl, 10, Triumphs.

Damascus Nine Beats Walkersville, 9 to 4

Damascus, Md., Aug. 10 (Spl.).—One big inning, the first, when an error, pass, four singles and a double, by Poole, yielding six runs, enabled Damascus to defeat Walkerville in the Tri-County League, 9 to 4.

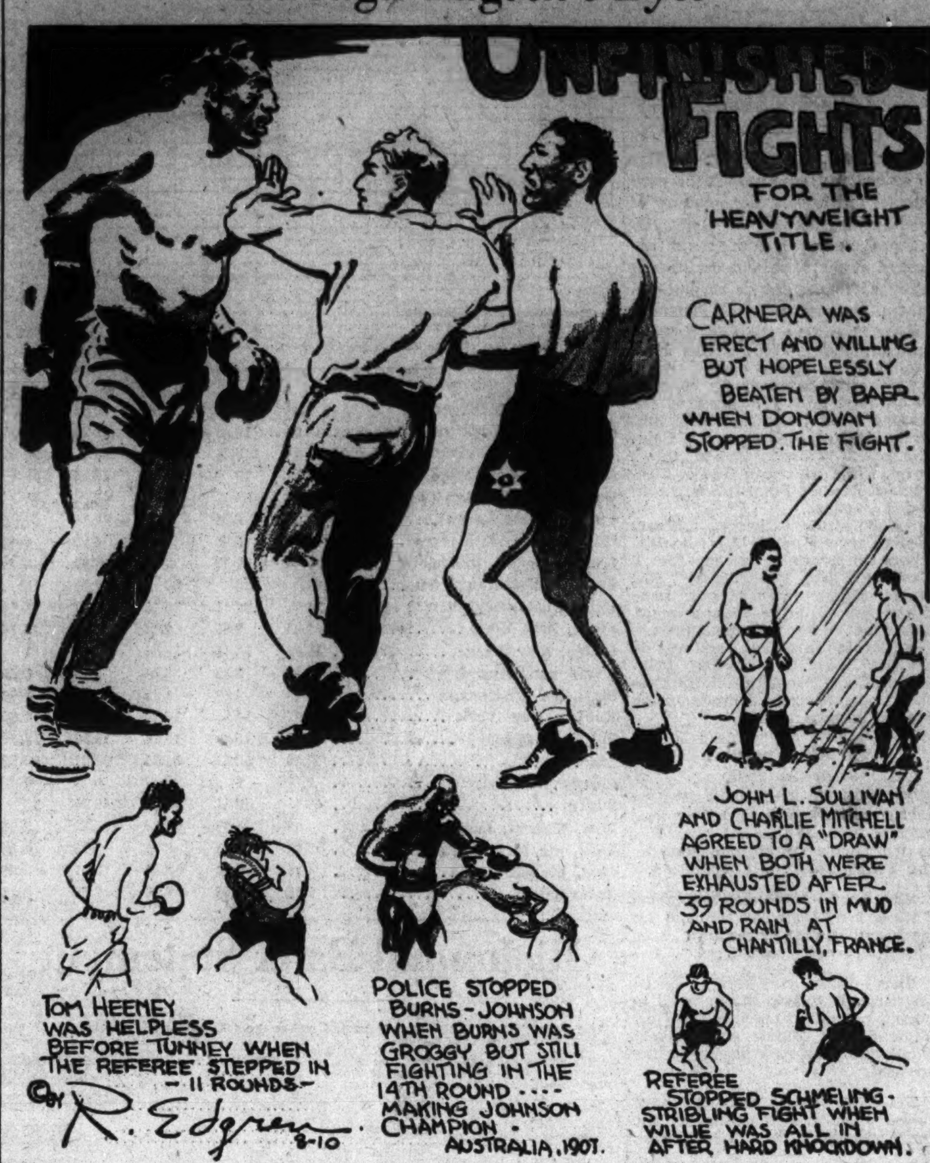

While Poole was touched up for nine safeties, including two doubles and a triple, the blows were kept scattered except in the fourth inning, when two runs were made.

Petrin, Brown In Battle of Left Hooks

A BRACE of the trickiest left hooks in the sock and block business will be released for action when Don Petrin squares off against Natie Brown in a ten-round heavyweight battle that will headline the Griffith Stadium program of punch Monday night.

Petrin wields his southpaw hook best from long range, and keeps continually flinging it, then maneuvering away from trouble. Brown swings his with greatest effect as he comes in, then plods on to the body. Petrin always has been the proud possessor of a potent right hand, which is delivered with most telling effect in an uppercut. Brown, usually considered a somewhat feeble flipper of his starboard fin, swung it with tremendous power and enervating precision in his most recent battle, against Arthur Huttick, here.

Seeks Eight Straight.

Brown is in the midst of a winning streak, which he hopes to extend to eight straight at the expense of Petrin. Following a draw with Walter Neusel, he decisioned Hans Birkie, Al Stillman (twice), Marty Gallagher, Bob Tow, Johnny Risko and Arthur Huttick. His uninterrupted string of wins has boosted him from the bottom of the fistic ladder to the eighth ranking position among the heavyweights.

Petrin is little heavier than a light heavyweight, but campaigns with equal skill against the bigger boys. He trounced Buddy McArthur in his debut here some weeks ago, then jumped right back in to take a decision over Eddie Simms on the last ball park card.

Burl Foe of Landers.

Eddie Burl, Florida featherweight, and Billy Landers, of Norfolk, in an eight-round semifinal, will top what is perhaps the most pretentious supporting card yet arranged by the Griffith Stadium promoters.

Jimmy Reed, the Jacksonville clown, just recently returned to the local wars, will fight a real, honest-to-goodness grudge battle with Roy Manley, of Washington, in a six-rounder. Feeling between these two always has run very high, and their last bout, which was preceded and followed by dressing room brawls, did little to lessen the ill will they bear toward each other.

Sammy Lucas, of Cincinnati, will square off against Billy Bullock, Washington featherweight, in another six. Jackie Donnelly and Harry Kershey will open in a four-rounder.

Women's U. S. Net Singles Looming as Wide-Open Affair

By Jimmy Powers
(Pinch Hitting for Gallico.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (Spl.). Each summer at this time there comes to Forest Hills a great cluster of stars, a sort of tennis Pleiades. They are girls, very young girls mostly, and of surprising beauty. They go into the West Side Club, as they did today, and there they practice backhands, forehands, cut shots and services, screened from the outside world by an immense hedge of trimmed and closely planted oaks. When you go in to watch them, as I did, you feel uncomfortable when you discover you are the only male in the place.

Today there was a great pinging of tennis bats, a prodigious amount of scurrying and leaping as the girls tuned up their shots for the Nationals, which begin Monday. Every one seems to think this year's championship will be most exciting because all the really great players are being beaten regularly. A promise of a wide-open finals, you must remember, is rare in a game that adheres so tenaciously to form. Helen Jacobs, a tanned Brunhilde, is the champion, and confesses to more than a mild concern over the etching of her name on the silver bowl she defended against Helen Wills Moody last year.

Faced Certain Defeat.

Do you recall that match? Mrs. Moody walked off the court within a few minutes of certain defeat. Typewriters and telegraph instruments ceased their cricket chorus in the press marquee. We received word that a vertebrae pained Mme. Moody and that she would rest before competing in the doubles. Later she decided not to play in the doubles. Still later she boarded a train and went to California where she remained in a hospital so long that all of her critics regretted they had called her a poor sport.

Mme. Moody gave her victor a perfunctory handshake, mumbled congratulations so low that "Miss Jakey" stood there in the sun fumbling with the salmon colored sweater she was absently tugging over her shoulders. Mrs. Moody was so numb with pain she forgot the little niceties. She gamely continued as long as she could, then, grim-lipped, she walked away, hisses and booes ringing in her aching head.

English are Cocky.

Next Saturday an English girl may win. The English are cocky now and on the crest of a patriotic sports wave. Betty Nuthall has been playing well. Freda James, a finely sculptured Miss, is good, and the left-handed, long-legged Kay Stammers has speed that makes you whistle. Ping! A little white bomb comes whizzing over and explodes in the chalk lines. How she flogs that ball! A good player is Elizabeth Ryan, the lady from California who has been living abroad so much she is seldom permitted to play on our Wightman Cup team.

She says it is "hawf pawst" two o'clock and the tournaments in the south of "Frawnce" were terribly exciting "lawst" winter. I guess she is about the very best doubles player in the world.

Not All Are Beauties.

Don't let me oversell the beauty of these girls. As I walked along the courts I saw here a snubnose, there a massive calf that did not measure up to a Ziegfeld standard, but on an average the field was a delight. All eyes sparkled with health, complexions were rose-tinted or tanned the correct shade of lemon yellow. Their fluttering white-skirted shorts looked neat and crisp.

Once I walked backstage in a musical show and I remember how sad I felt over the thought that most of the fresh girlish faces and forms would some day be the property of fat stock brokers or pudgy, pawing playboys. These tennis maids average as many Beatrices, Cleopatras and Heloises, and they invariably marry well. Mrs. John Van Ryn, Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, Mrs. Fearnley Whittingstall are examples. They are good sports because competition disciplines them and they retain more of their femininity than women golfers or women track stars. They were all out there in the sun today, squealing and giggling, a pattern of human beauty on the smooth, green lawn. I hated to leave the place and come in to regard the cold and stolid keyboard of a typewriter.

Capital Printer Nine Wins U.S. Title

Defeats Cincinnati, 13-7, in Final Game for 6th Straight Victory.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (AP).—Washington today won the Union Printers' International Baseball Tournament, defeating Cincinnati, 13 to 7, in the deciding game at the Yankee Stadium.

It was the sixth successive victory for the Washington team, which went through the entire tourney without a setback. The losers suffered their second defeat, which put them out of the running. The tournament is conducted on the basis that each team which is defeated twice is eliminated until there is only one survivor left.

The losers had a 16 to 13 edge in the hitting and received the benefit of five errors, but could not bunch their blows effectively except in the fourth inning. Washington had scored 10 runs when the Cincinnati rally began, tallying 5 in the fifth.

Today's victory marks the eleventh time the Washington Printers have captured the title. Following success in 1913 there was a long, lean spell until 1922, when they won and repeated every year until 1927. They were unsuccessful in 1928, but again captured the honors in 1929 and followed with wins in 1931 and 1932.

Stocks React Moderately as Trading Drops

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Inflationary sentiment cooled off in speculative markets today, causing a moderate reaction in stocks and commodities.

Overnight study of the Government's move to nationalize silver seemed to have convinced markets that its bullish significance had been overemphasized yesterday.

Heavy Rains.

Heavy rains in sections of the drought-stricken areas of the West served to divert attention from crop losses. Some commodities, however, attained new tops for the movement before the reaction took hold.

The rush of short-covering touched off by the silver announcement in the previous session appeared to have subsided around the opening. Deprived of that source of buying power, the stock market yielded to a moderate inflow of profit-taking.

Trading quieted on the decline. Transfers dropped to 772,310 shares compared with 1,416,220 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks dipped 1.6 points, to 70.9.

Trading in silver futures remained suspended; but a dealer in metals posted a spot price of silver for industrial uses at 49¾ cents an ounce, fractionally under the price the Government will take over domestic stocks.

Unchecked Liquidation.

Unchecked liquidation in railroad bonds, principally second-grade issues, was attributed partly to fear that the uptrend in commodity prices would mean a continued increase in operating expenses to the detriment of net income.

Railroad shares also were subjected to pressure on the reaction, despite the fact the weekly car-loading statement, showing a gain of 2,450 cars over the preceding week, was better than had been forecast in some quarters. Santa Fe lost nearly 3 points. Union Pacific, New York Central, Atlantic Coast Line and Erie dropped 1 to more than 2 points.

Profit taking centered in metal shares after their run-up on the silver news. It was pointed out on further study that it meant little at the moment for domestic producers, although the effect on the world price of the white metal promised to aid foreign mines. Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting, Howe Sound and U. S. Smelting yielded about 2 to 4 points of preceding gains.

Among issues showing losses of 1 to 2 points were U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, Johns Manville and U. S. Rubber. U. S. Steel preferred dipped 4 points, to 78, a new 1934 low.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

President Roosevelt's Green Bay Speech Offers Little of the Assurance That Is Needed for Helping Business Confidence.

By Ralph West Robey.

President Roosevelt's speech at Green Bay Thursday morning was virtually the exact opposite of what was needed to encourage business. Instead of restoring confidence, it could only have the effect of further undermining confidence. Instead of reflecting an appreciation of the growing worry among those responsible for employing labor, it denied that there is such worry. Instead of promising an economic system based upon the tenets of liberal capitalism, it promised an economic system that will involve the subjection of all private initiative to the direction of the State.

As if to justify such a position the President set up for demolition the most absurd kind of a straw man. He contrasted what he proposes to do with the claimed desires of some one who wants all Government supervision of business eliminated. He implied that if we did not go ahead with the New Deal, the "old law of the tooth and the claw would reign once more."

Picture He Presents Does Not Reflect General View.

The President knows that this is not the only alternative. He knows that business men in pleading with him to put a stop to the rapidly growing regimentation of business do not want an elimination of all Government supervision. He knows that he could not point to a significant number of men, big or little, who believe that a utility henceforth should be permitted "to charge any rate, reasonable or otherwise," that the railroads should be allowed to "go back to rebates and other secret agreements," that processors of foodstuffs should be permitted "to disregard all rules of health and of good faith," &c.

Of more significance from the point of view of the business outlook than such negative aspects of the speech was the promise of more and more action. As the President put it, "In one year and five months the people of the United States have received at least a partial answer to their demands for action, and neither the demand nor the action has reached the end of the road." That, it may be assumed, is a direct answer to those who have been maintaining that business needed a breathing spell from the uncertainty of a constant stream of new policies out of Washington.

Further answer is provided in the statement that "There is no lack of confidence on the part of those business men, farmers and workers who clearly read the signs of the time." There is not, then, any occasion, as the President sees it, for a let-up in the drive of the New Deal. The worry of business men—for there can be no doubt that there is such worry — is insignificant. Their trouble is that they do not "clearly read the signs of the time."

This may be true. Perhaps business men are needlessly scared. Perhaps the dangers they are afraid are immediately ahead will not materialize. But the fact remains that as our economic system at present is constituted, these business men have a major influence on employment and through that upon our general social welfare. It manifestly is not sufficient, therefore, merely to tell them that they do not "clearly read the signs of the time." This can only have the effect of further undermining their willingness to make plans for the future.

Bond Market Moves Down Four-Tenths

Federal List Is Unsteady; Sales Volume Falls to $16,826,000.

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—The bond market was beset by numerous cross currents today and under the influence of an unsteady Government list, declines of small fractions to more than a point were in the majority at the close.

Transfers approximated $16,826,000, compared with $30,092,000 on Thursday, and the Standard Statistics Co. average of 60 domestic corporate loans declined four-tenths of a point to 83.1.

Inflationary Sentiment.

Inflationary sentiment, which developed near the close on Thursday after the Government's announcement of the nationalization of silver and gave lower priced issues momentary strength, cooled considerably during the day and this group of loans was the heaviest loser, although many prime investment issues failed to find support.

The extent to which buyers and sellers were apart in their judgment of values was indicated by the large number of bonds of the same concern which moved in opposite directions pricewise. Three issues of Baltimore & Ohio loans advanced one-half to a point, while four yielded one half to 2, and two issues remained unchanged. The same was true of Chesapeake & Ohio, Great Northern, Detroit Edison, Missouri Pacific and others.

New York Central loans were uniformly lower, the Consolidated 4s losing 1¼ points to close at 84¼, and the 4½s declined 1½ points at 58½. Other issues losing around a point included obligations of the New Haven, Louisville & Nashville; Pennsylvania, Portland Gas, International Telephone, Sinclair Oil, Southern Pacific and Southern Colorado Power.

Canadian National Railway loans again were in fair demand and advanced round ½ point; Chesapeake Corporation 5s gained ¼ to 101½, General Petroleum 5s advanced ¼ to 105½, and obligations of Kelly Springfield, Goodyear, Midvale Steel, Paramount-Publix, Richfield Oil, and American Beet Sugar made modest gains.

Entire List Sags.

With the exception of the Fourth 4¾ Libertys, the entire Government list sagged one thirty-second to twenty-two thirty-seconds. Federal Farm Mortgage 3¼s yielded fifteen thirty-seconds to 100.26, the 3s were eight thirty-seconds lower at 99.20 and both issues of Home Owners Loans were under par at losses of eight thirty-seconds to ten thirty-seconds. Treasury 3⅜s of '41-'43 closed at 104.10.

The foreign section was generally quiet. Argentine issues were irregular following the advance of the previous day, the City of Buenos Aires bonds were around 2 points higher. German 7s were slightly lower.

Curb Declines Slightly Under Profit-Taking

Activity Generally Limited; Transfers Drop to 146,000 Shares.

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Failing to extend yesterday's rally, the curb market fell back under pressure of profit taking today

Some scattered firm spots appeared at the close, but declines of fractions to a point or so predominated. Activity was generally limited, transfers slipping back to approximately 146,000 shares from 202,000 shares yesterday.

Oils were exceedingly narrow throughout, and a number of the leading members finished unchanged. In the power group Commonwealth Edison pushed up a point, while American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share conceded fractions.

Alcohols were heavy. Hiram Walker sagged nearly 2, while Distillers Corporation-Seagrams lost 1. Newmont and New Jersey Zinc ended slighty higher, but Lake Shore dipped more than a point. Other metals finished about even.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Textiles—The indications are that textile activity will be better than general business this fall, according to the Textile Organ, published by the Tubize Chatillon Corporation.

Zinc, Lead—Trade quarters report a moderately improved demand for lead and zinc. Prices are firm, though quotably unchanged.

Flour—Prices have been advanced substantially following the trend in wheat, but mill agents in the New York district report a relatively small volume of new buying on the advance.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—For some time the sky seemed to be the limit of the persistent advance of high grade bonds, but now Wall street has started to wonder whether the sky may not have been reached.

The long term United States Government issues have recently reached the highest price of a generation; save for a short period in 1928. For the past fortnight, however, these and other highest grade bonds have wavered, as though bumping along what Wall street calls a "ceiling."

At their highest prices, eight of the long term Governments were selling at an average yield of only 2.72 per cent. Currently, the yield is a little more than 2.80 per cent.

The question now arises as to whether, under existing conditions, particularly with the large volume of Federal debt, both direct and indirect, the long term debt of the Government can command a rate of much less than 2¾ to 3 per cent.

Most of the Government debt is lodged with the Federal Reserve and commercial banks. There has been little inclination in the banking world to lighten these holdings, particularly since the excess reserves of the member banks, which are earning nothing, have risen close to $2,000,000,000.

As a matter of fact, the commercial banks have in the aggregate continued to add to their holdings of the Government obligations. Nevertheless, there has been a little more inclination recently to invest in bonds other than U. S. Governments, and a few banks are believed to have taken profits on a few of their Federals bought at lower levels.

Once a real demand for commercial credit develops, and bank confidence in corporation bonds is improved, it is likely that bankers will turn to the better profits available in financing private industry.

London—The American silver plan stimulated higher prices on the stock exchange today. Silver shares rose moderately, gold mining shares strengthened, while transatlantic issues were adjusted to higher levels in sympathy with the further improvement in Wall street. Argentine rails were strong on the favorable wheat situation, and British stocks were well supported. All sections reacted from their best, and the market closed firm.

Paris—News of the nationalization of silver in the United States gave the bourse one of its most active sessions in recent weeks. Led by oil and gold mining shares, international issues were strong, but rentes declined. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—A general upward tendency prevailed on the boerse today with interest centering around annuities, although stocks also gained. The closing was sustained.

Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 10 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture). — Trade in Western-grown wools was slightly broader than it had been for many weeks. The volume of sales, however, did not reach more than very moderate proportions. Thus far the improvement has been scattered as to houses receiving business and to lines affected, trade being confined largely to a few lines, including original bag 64s and finer and graded 56s, ⅜-blood territory wools. A little business was transacted on spot average 12 months Texas wool at around 70 cents, scoured basis.

Wheat Values React Sharply As Rallies Fail

Corn Leads Advances; Price of Oats Also Is Pushed Higher.

Chicago, Aug. 10 (AP).—Uncertainty over the eventual effect of nationalization of silver did much to bring about sharp reactions in grain values today.

The reactions came both early and late with intermittent bulges in which wheat, corn, oats and barley outdid for the fifth successive day the season's high price records.

Corn led today's advances owing to correct general belief that August Government crop estimates due after the close of trading would show terrific shrinkage of yields.

May Prove More.

On the other hand, a pronounced disposition in many quarters was apparent to regard inflationary consequences of silver nationalization as likely to prove a good deal less striking than at first was expected.

Wheat closed weak, 1⅛@1½ cents under yesterday's finish; corn unchanged to ⅝ higher; oats, ⅝ off to ¾ up, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 12 cents.

In violent rallies that failed to hold, both corn and oats prices swept up temporarily to the highest point reached since 1930. Buying of the feed grains was on a big scale at times, but general speculative demand for cereals, including wheat, was not so heavy as on the previous day.

Leading commission houses were advising conservatism on the purchase side, and some asserted flatly that the culmination of price advances had been witnessed for at least the time being.

Trade Comments.

Trade comments after receipt of the Government's new crop estimates were that the official report was about in line with average expectations here both as to corn and other grains.

Preference in today's dealings was shown for corn futures by professional traders and the speculating public because margin requirements on corn are smaller than those on wheat, and also because corn crop damage is continuing unabated over large sections of territory. Crop news on wheat appeared to have lost influence, although Canadian unofficial estimates were reduced today to the lowest figures yet made by any authoritative source.

Heavy profit-taking sales on advances in quotations formed an outstanding feature in all grains. Some recent foremost advocates of higher prices were conspicuous today as recommending the buying side only on setbacks.

Local Bankers Will Consider Housing Act

Siddons Orders Special Meeting to Study Program.

As the Federal Housing Administration has just issued preliminary instructions relating to loans to the public for alteration, repair and improvement of property as provided in the National housing act, Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the bankers association and secretary of American Security & Trust Co., has called a special meeting of the association for Monday, at 4:30 p. m., in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co.

At this meeting, Francis G. Addison, jr., president, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, who is acting as chairman of the committee appointed by the association and also representing it in the American Bankers Association, will report for his committee to the association so that all members of local banks will be acquainted with rules and regulations promulgated under Bulletin No. 1, and will be prepared to serve the public when the Housing Administration announces it desires loans to be made.

President Siddons said: "I am confident that all of our local banking institutions are in hearty cooperation with the plans promulgated by the Federal Housing Administration and will be prepared to render proper service to those making applications for such loans."

At the annual convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association held at White Sulphur Springs, last May, the following resolution was unanimously adopted at the final session:

"Resolved, that the members of the District of Columbia Bankers Association lend their support and encouragement to the program of the Government for the modernization and renovation of the homes and that they endeavor to cooperate under the plan outlined by the President for granting credit for modernization purposes.

"Be it resolved, further, that the members of this association take a sympathetic and cooperative attitude toward the Government's effort to improve housing conditions and methods of mortgage finance."

The final tone of the market was barely steady with last prices showing net declines of 7 to 20 points.

Initial prices were 5 to 9 points lower on overnight realizing orders and private reports of showers in east Texas. Active selling during the forenoon forced quotations 22 to 25 points lower with October selling at 13.60 and May 13.93.

This decline brought in increased demand from houses with Liverpool connections and some trade buying and covering, but after showing rallies of about 10 or 12 points from the lowest, the market eased off again. Closing quotations were within 3 or 4 points of the lowest on most positions.

Southern Selling Reported.

Some Southern selling was reported here during the morning, but the pressure was mostly attributed to realizing. The inflationary talk of late yesterday appeared to have been modified by the failure of foreign exchange markets to show further advances.

The report of the New York Cotton Exchange Service estimating consumption for July at 355,000 bales was considered about in line with expectations.

Exports today 5,425, making 90,383 so far this season. Port receipts, 11,669; United States port stocks, 2,391,230.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was moderately active and irregular today, closing 5 points lower to 2 net higher. Sales, 117 lots. Further scattered buying on the inflationary talk, as well as the early advance in grains, carried prices into new highs for the season, but realizing and refiner selling, encouraged by the reaction in lard and the decline in cotton, checked the upturn and recessions followed. Bleachable spot nominal; September closed 6.73, October, 6.76; December, 6.97; January, 7.01; March, 7.17.

S. 1 Class A (best shelling stock), 3¼@3½; few 3½; U. S. 1 Class A (best Jumbos), 3⅝; poorer Jumbos, 3⅜@3½; U. S. 1 Class A (best bunch), 3½; few higher, poorer bunch, 3⅜. Spanish type peanuts are also pretty well cleaned up, with only a few large lots now remaining, which are being held above the minimum price under the marketing agreement of $7½ per 30-lb. bushel.

Shelled and cleaned Virginias are stronger, with millers reporting increased orders. Prices have been advanced ⅛c per pound during the week by some interests, but others are still holding at last week's levels. Shelled Spanish are also in better demand, at last week's prices.

Steel Shipments Decrease in July

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—The United States Steel Corporation reported today that its shipments of finished steel in July decreased 615,389 tons, to 369,938 tons, against 985,327 in June.

The corporation's shipments in July, 1933, amounted to 701,322 tons; July, 1932, 272,448, and July, 1931, 489,900.

$152,000,000 Gain in Cotton Crop Reported

Smaller Yield Nets More in Depreciated Cash, Hester's Statement Says.

New Orleans, Aug. 10 (AP).—Secretary Emeritus H. G. Hester and Active Secretary Henry Plauche of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, in an elaboration of Hester's recent statistics on the 1933-34 season just closed, said that "nominally we have received $152,000,000 more for the A 13,368,000-bale commercial crop (of 1933-34) than we did for the preceding 15,000,000-bale commercial crop.

They added, however, "but with the difference that this year's receipts were more or less in depreciated dollars."

"The old order of things, return of which is ardently longed for by the trade, no longer exists," said their joint detailed report to the exchange. "The system of supply and demand has been supplemented by supply and demand plus Government, and for the nonce the Government is the most powerful if not the most important.

Result of Efforts.

"What may result from the efforts to rectify errors of a previous Administration and to lessen the excessive supply by reducing production, while maintaining a fair rate of consumption, is problematical. * * *

"On the whole, however, the year has been much better."

The report noted with satisfaction the reduction in carryover, here and abroad, to 10,598,000 bales, against last year's carryover of 11,339,000 bales, but added: "We are still left with an excessive carryover which it is hoped may be materially lessened by the end of the coming year."

The official high for cotton of middling grade of the past season was given at 13.05 cents a pound on July 18, 1934, and the low at 8.32 cents a pound touched on August 8, 1933.

$682,207,102 Total.

Value of the cotton produced during the season was placed at $682,207,102, against the 1932-33 value of $259,399,751. Counting the seed, the value of the crop was $792,722,102, compared with $596,389,751 last year.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
Patent applied for

Underwood & Underwood.

One of the busiest spots in the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, where literally millions of requests for advice, assistance and relief are constantly arriving. Photo shows Harry L. Kinmera, chief clerk, answering some of them with the assistance of Miss Katherine Birdsall.

An urgent appeal for public opinion to save the Civil Service from destruction at the hands of spoilsmen is contained in a full-page editorial in the current issue of the Federal Employe, official magazine of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

BAKER

"On every front," the N. F. F. E. declares, "the spoilsmen are pushing forward . . . The hordes of job seekers are being accommodated. Thousands are being placed, or already have been placed. It is fallacious to assume that the drive of the spoilsmen has been successful only in the new Federal agencies. The pressure for jobs—a pressure which has increased rather than diminished—and the attitude of cynical indifference assumed in high places with respect to the Civil Service has made the situation more critical with the passage of time."

Pointing out that an overwhelming majority of newspapers have taken a position in strong support of the merit system, the N. F. F. E. asserts that "there is a growing public conviction of the monstrous condition which has arisen through a brazen resumption of practices thought discarded more than 50 years ago."

It is noteworthy, according to Luther C. Steward, NFFE president that Civil Service is being defended by Democratic and Republican newspapers.

"Editors of virtually all political complexions are agreed on the dangers inherent in the personnel policies now being pursued in many branches of the Federal Government," Mr. Steward said.

Reports on the Donovan hearing will be received by the Joint Committee for Unity of Government Employes at a meeting at 8 p. m. Monday at the Ebbett Hotel, Tenth and H streets northwest, Miss Bertha Blair, Labor, chairman of the committee, announces. All Government employes are invited to attend.

With an increased understanding of the responsibility of citizenship, one of the benefits resulting from its program of workers' education, the Emergency Education Division of the FERA is preparing to expand this activity next month.

The program is under direction of Miss Hilda Smith (*), specialist in workers' education. Miss Smith was formerly dean of Bryn Mawr College.

For many industrial workers whose minds are adult, but whose education was cut short in youth, Miss Smith pointed out, the program of workers' classes is the answer to a hunger for additional information. Eighteen summer training centers to instruct teachers in the special work of these classes will equip approximately 550 teachers to begin teaching this fall.

Harry Goldsmith (*), examiner, Patent Office, is the proud father of a 7-pound 9 ounce girl, who has been named Grace. Mrs. Anne Goldsmith and infant are resting comfortably at Columbia Hospital.

Under auspices of the Bureau of Biological Survey, a meeting of conservationists, Government officials and workers and others was held this week in the new Agricultural Auditorium, at which were presented facts regarding the critical waterfowl situation. The effect of the drought on the various species of game birds and what the Biological Survey proposes to do toward restoration of the depleted numbers of waterfowl to their breeding grounds were discussed.

The speakers included Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, J. N. "Ding" Darling, chief of the Survey, and the following Survey experts: Clarence Cottam, Frederick C. Lincoln, Dr. W. B. Bell and Stanley P. Young. Two motion pictures were shown, one on the wild life refuge and another on the duck sickness of the West.

U. S. Asks $250,703 From Wodehouse

Tax Lien Filed Against British Author.

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Bertie Wooster and Jeeves put their creator in a distressing, even 'orrible plight, today in jolly short order.

The Government informed barristers for the English author, P. G. Wodehouse, that in their opinion he owes the Federal Treasury $250,703.

A tax lien for that amount was filed in Federal District Court, and, as everybody knows, Bertie and Jeeves and the book-buying public are responsible for a great share of the author's earnings. His wife, Ethel, also an author, was named on the lien, too.

It was alleged by the Government that the $250,703 represented unpaid income taxes for the years 1925 to 1931, inclusive, amounting to $123,826, and penalties of $126,877.

RFC Is Ready To Buy Closed Banks' Assets

Jones Says Relief for D. C. Depositors Is Available.

Purchase of assets of closed banks in the District of Columbia is compatible with legislation enacted at the last session of Congres and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation stands ready to do so, Chairman Jesse Jones said last night.

Mr. Jones said this method of relief for depositors in Washington's closed banks has been available since passage of the Steagall bill which clothed the RFC with new powers for liquidation of assets in unopened banks.

Reappraisals of the assets of closed banks throughout the Nation are now being made by the RFC with a view to extending additional loans. The RFC, Mr. Jones explained, is eager to lend to the full value of all sound assets to afford depositors a maximum of relief under the law.

Defining the powers and attitude of the Government agency, he said: "This corporation will lend on real estate, or any other sound collateral put up by a qualified organization. If requested, we will purchase the assets of a closed bank."

In the District of Columbia the RFC hitherto has pursued a policy of lending on bank assets rather than purchasing them outright. It was said no local bank receiver has requested of the RFC that it purchase assets of the bank under his care.

Mr. Jones suggested that depositors' committees of closed banks approach the RFC if they have data showing that larger loans or outright purchases are possible.

Aerial Express Rates Reduced

Eastern Air Lines Also Announce New Zoning Plan.

Rezoning of the United States and new air express tariffs, which will become effective over its routes August 15, bringing a reduction in the cost of shipping as well as a new minimum shipping rate, were announced yesterday by Eastern Air Lines, Inc. The company is affiliated with General Air Express, the Nation-wide system in which five major air transport companies and Postal Telegraph are affiliated.

The reduction, the announcement pointed out, is the first made since General Air Express was formed, and results from the fact that a great volume of traffic has developed, permitting a smaller carrying charge for individual shipments.

At present the minimum rate is $1.25 for 1 pound or less, C. P. Ryman, air traffic manager for Eastern Air Lines, stated. Under the new rate structure, effective August 15, the minimum rate will be reduced to 85 cents on shipments of three-quarters of a pound or less, and $1 on shipments up to 1 pound, and the new rates on the minimum classes will give them transportation to any point in the United States. All rates include special pick up and delivery by Postal Telegraph.

John Kane, 74, Creator of New Art Style, Dies

Laborer, Growing Aged, Turns to Painting, Wins Fame.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 10 (AP).—Smiling John Kane, artist extraordinary—the man who quit painting houses to create what critics term "a new style of primitive art"—died today, regretting he lacked the strength to sign his last picture.

Stricken with tuberculosis, Kane, 74, passed away in the Tuberculosis League Hospital. His wife and daughter were at his deathbed. Kane and his wife, both Scotch-Irish, shared a humble flat several flights up and at the rear of a building along noisy Fifth avenue. The flat also served as the old man's studio and each of the several rooms was stacked with oil paintings.

Coming to America from Scotland as a boy, he worked for years in the hot steel mills of the Pittsburgh district. Later came a business panic and he turned to laboring tasks. Finally Kane became a house painter.

But he always cherished art ambitions. A few years ago he climbed down from his ladder. He told his wife that although they had been poor in the past they would have even less in the future, for he was renouncing craftsmanship for art.

"There's something inside of me that I've got to get out," he explained.

Mrs. Kane approved.

The last painting, which had not yet been signed, is a vista of industrial Pittsburgh, the theme of most of his work. It will be displayed at the international exhibition of paintings in October, where many of Kane's earlier pictures have been hung. His work has been exhibited from Toledo, Ohio, to New York City and Cambridge, Mass. Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., and Prof. John Dewey are among those who have purchased Kane's pictures.

Airport Weather Data Held 'Unfair'

Kansas City, Aug. 10 (AP).—The Kansas City Chamber of Commerce has asked the Weather Bureau at Washington to move its weather instruments in Kansas City from the airport to some other place in the city.

The airport readings, says the chamber, are not fair because they generally are a couple of degrees or so higher than the reading on instruments on a building 161 feet above the ground, where the Government instruments formerly were kept.

When the instruments 161 feet up in the air showed a temperature of 108, the airport figures, which the Government accepted as official, were 110.

DICK TRACY — Steve Changes His Mind

Walt Mason, Himself

The Tragic King.

For centuries he has been slurred, Old England's monarch, Richard III, his infamy increased; the writers of succeeding reigns set forth, with most excessive pains, to prove he was a beast. They said he had no kingly charm, and he possessed a withered arm, a hump upon his back; he had no dignity or pride, and looked, with his slow, sluggist stride, like some cheap steeple-jack. They charged him up with all the crimes that were invented in his times, he should have been in jail; he slew the princes in the tower, to seal and concentrate his power, and make his foemen quail. Bill Shakespeare put him in a play so forcefully that to this day men shudder at his name; that such a man could wear a crown, and hold a throne and scepter down, seems like a burning shame. Now, after some 500 years, a great biography appears, and Richard gets his dues; it seems he was the finest king that ever chose to smile and sing, his subjects to amuse. He slew no princes in their beds, he let foul traitors keep their heads, because he was so kind; and if some grevious wars occurred, he did not give the fighting word, he was to peace inclined. This information soothes and cheers, but after these 500 years, I doubt if Dick will care; the roses often come too late to comfort a poor human skate, and ease his soul's despair.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE GREAT DROUGHT

LIKE a monster, the Great Drought of 1934 has stretched its ravenous claws across two-thirds of the land . . leaving 1,433 counties in 21 States prostrate with hunger, thirst, desolation.

In tomorrow's Sunday Post will appear two feature articles on the drought—a penetrating analysis by Elliott Thurston and a vivid account by Osgood Nichols. Be sure to see them . . and read them . . in the Special Articles Section.
